BOY LAYS LOSS OF $512,000 TO HIS KIDNAPERS

Brokers' Runner Is Held After Giving Details of His Experience.

DETECTIVES ANSWER HIS TELEPHONE CALL

ACCUSED OF LARCENY AFTER FIVE-HOUR QUIZ

Police Say Discrepancies Marked His Story; Grilled by Whalen.

New York, Sept. 20 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Glib little Milton Alter, who informed Rivington Street four months ago that he had quit his $20-a-week job with a furrier because "furs ain't got a future," walked into the Guaranty Trust Co. today with a certified check for $400,000, and walked out again fifteen minutes later with $512,000 in stocks and bonds.

Of those securities $75,000 worth were readily negotiable, so it was with a degree of surprise that the stock exchange firm of R. V. Hiscoe & Co., at 111 Broadway, received a telephone call from Milton 3 hours and 45 minutes later.

He was terribly sorry but he had been robbed, he said. R. V. Hiscoe & Co., which had had the police department and the National Surety Co. in a flutter for 3 hours and 20 minutes, was much less surprised at that news.

Milton said that he was at the corner of Roebling street and Broadway, Brooklyn, and that he'd be much obliged if they'd send some one over to get him, as the nickel he'd put in the telephone had been his last. R. V. Hiscoe & Co. replied that it would be equally obliged if he'd wait right where he was until some one could get there.

Not Greatly Surprised.

In ten minutes two carloads of detectives, one from the Greenwich street station with a member of the firm in tow, the other from headquarters, arrived and found Milton waiting. Having been reared in Rivington street, he was not greatly surprised at the arrival of detectives. He was, in fact, entirely prepared for them; he had a clear and lucid account of how he had been robbed.

He had been kidnaped at the door of the Guaranty Trust Co., at 140 Broadway, he said, by two swarthy men, Italians from their appearance.

With cold menace they had guided him to a gleaming motor which waited at the curb and had invited him to enter it.

Snugly settled in the tonneau, one of the swarthy kidnapers had instructed the chauffeur—who was clad in costly livery—to drive around the town. The chauffeur had, accordingly, taken them for a long drive.

Remembers Route Perfectly.

Milton could remember the route perfectly. The car traveled north in Broadway to West Seventy-second street, circled back downtown, crossed over the Williamsburg bridge, toured Brooklyn, returned to Manhattan and cruised the Fourteenth street region, and finally returned by a roundabout way to the bridge, and thence to Roebling street and Broadway.

He was set on the curb and the car drove off. That was all there was to it.

The representatives of the Hiscoe firm, the detectives and Alfred Tyrrell, chief adjuster for the National Surety Co., nodded their heads in comprehension.

But, they inquired, why had he not obeyed instructions and waited at the Guaranty Trust until Dan Donnelly, the 6-foot guard, arrived from Hiscoe & Co. to chaperone his return trip.

Recalled No Such Order.

Milton was sorry, but he remembered receiving no such order. He had done just what he had been told to do; he had gone to the Bank of America and obtained a certification of the check, he had gone with it to the Guaranty Trust, he had proffered it in payment of a loan and had asked for the $512,000 securities which Hiscoe & Co. had on deposit there as collateral. Then he had started back down Broadway when the two dark men, who looked like Italians——

"Yes, the police remembered that part of the story. They took Milton to the Greenwich Street station for questioning.

From time to time detectives emerged from the inner offices where the questioning was being done. They had nothing to say.

This almost drove Louis Alter crazy. Why didn't they tell him, he wanted to know, whether his boy, who was always a good boy, was a robber or not?

He had not learned that Milton and the securities had vanished un-

Rebecca Rogers Jury Discharged by Judge

Body Deadlocked to Last With Nine in Favor Of Acquittal.

MRS. REBECCA ROGERS.

New Braunfels, Tex., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—The jury, which for nearly 48 hours had sought to determine the guilt or innocence of Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers, tried for bank robbery, was discharged at 5:40 p. m. for failure to agree.

District Attorney Fred Blundell had indicated that he did not intend to attempt another prosecution.

The jury stood 9 to 3 for acquittal.

Thus the fourth court appearance of Mrs. Rogers, demure 24-year-old former Texas University student, since she held up the Buda, Tex., Farmers National Bank in December, 1926, ended in stalemate.

It was the first such mistrial of a felony in this county within ten years.

For Otis Rogers, who was 27 years old today, the jury's failure to agree was disappointing, but he thanked each juror for the "earnest deliberation." He had pleaded that his young wife, whom he married secretly while both were students at the university, temporarily was insane when she took around $1,000 from the bank with her small pistol.

The verdict was received on behalf of the State by County Attorney Frank Voigt, District Attorney Blundell already having gone home to Lockhart, where his wife was reported seriously ill.

The jury took 40 ballots. In the first two the count was 8 to 4 for acquittal, but one man was won over, and thereafter they registered, over and over again, 9 to 3.

There was just a trace of a smile on "Becky's" face as the verdict was read, but she said nothing.

Rogers, assisted in presenting the defense only by two young lawyer classmates and friends of his college days, prepared to take his young wife to their home in Fort Worth immediately. The next move, he had de-

HOOVER SCORES DRYS WHO LEAN ON LAWS ALONE

Tells W.C.T.U. Too Many Rely on "Strong Arm" to Aid Abstinence.

MESSAGE STRESSES NEED OF EDUCATION

President Holds Cause of Temperance Rests With Individual.

CONVENTION BACKS FRUIT-JUICE PLANS

Indorses Program for State Funds to Combat Work of Antiprohibitionists.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Need of more extensive education in the moral, physical and economic benefits of temperance was stressed by President Hoover in a letter of greeting, read today to the fifty-fifth annual convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Hoover's message deplored the burden placed upon law-enforcement agencies because of the failure of individuals to grasp the "personal value of temperance in all things."

The President's message, addressed to Mrs. Ella A. Boole, National W. C. T. U. president, read:

Need of Education.

"Please present my greetings to the convention of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union. I am daily impressed with the great need for extended work of education in the moral, physical and economic benefits of temperance. Since the adoption of the prohibition amendment too many people have come to rely wholly upon the strong arm of the law to enforce abstinence, forgetting that the cause of temperance has its strong foundations in the conviction of the individual of the personal value to himself of temperance in all things."

Fruit Juice Committee.

Recommendations conveyed in Mrs. Boole's address last night and the executive committee report today were unanimously adopted by the convention. These include creation of a department of nonalcoholic fruit products, the duties of which shall be to promote use of legal fruit juice beverages as a substitute for intoxicants and establishment by the State unions of reserve funds for use in combatting work of antitemperance organizations.

Other proposals favorably acted upon call for a membership campaign, organization of new unions, use of the press to make known the activities of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, increased emphasis on departmental work, distribution of a larger amount of temperance literature and Nation-wide celebration of the tenth anniversary next June 16 of the establishment of prohibition in the United States.

WATSON BACKS HOOVER TARIFF SILENCE POLICY

Chieftain of Senate Cites President's Desire to Keep Hands Off.

DATA ON 600 FIRMS ASKED OF TREASURY

Finance Committee to See Mills Again Today; May Pare List.

LEVY ON CANADIAN WHEAT IS RETAINED

Party Lines Are Obliterated in Vote on House Tax of Export Grain.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover's silence while the tariff controversy rages in the Senate was defended yesterday by Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, who said in a floor speech that he would use all the influence at his command to keep the Executive out of the contest while the revision bill is in the making.

The Senate chieftain cautioned against trying to force the President into the controversy and said it was the Executive's duty to act only when the bill reached him. The President has stated he would not interfere with pending legislation, and Watson said he though Hoover should and would stick to a hands-off policy.

The warning came after the finance committee Republicans had conferred with Treasury officials, including Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary, regarding difficulties facing the department in complying with requests from senators for tax data of corporations that might be useful in consideration of the pending bill.

Seek Data on 600 Concerns.

The list of corporations about which financial data has been sought passed the 600 mark yesterday, after Democrats asked for tax data concerning seventeen graphite producers and Northwestern Republicans interested in protection for lumber and shingles requested information bearing on 138 mills in the States of Washington and Oregon.

The finance committee majority also has listed several hundred names, mostly importers, but in view of the stupendous task they say the Treasury sees in the requests, they are expected to reduce the list materially.

Chairman Smoot said the Treasury officials contend it would take months to produce all the information requested because the data would have to be taken from each individual return and in some instances books of manufacturers would have to be inspected. The manufacturers themselves were not mentioned, under the Senate resolution authorizing collection of the data.

Another Conference Today.

The committee majority will meet again with Treasury officials today. On Monday they will invite the Democrats to cooperate, with a view to reducing the scope of some of the requests.

The finance committee lost another of its amendments to the House bill on the floor when party lines split and sent down to defeat, 51 to 18, a proposal to eliminate the House provision making Canadian wheat, milled in bond in the United States for export to Cuba, pay a duty of 30 per cent, which equals the tariff reduction Cuba grants American flour.

The vote scored a victory for the Southwestern millers of American wheat and the wheat growers over the Buffalo millers of Canadian wheat, and by it free milling in bond of foreign wheat now would be restricted

SHIPBUILDER REVEALS EARLY DOUBTS ON IDEA OF ENGAGING SHEARER

Henry Miller Service.

Daniel F. Cohalan, of New York (left), attorney for William B. Shearer (right) and Clinton L. Bardo (insert), president of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, as they appeared before the Senate investigation committee looking into charges that Shearer was hired by American shipbuilders to influence the Geneva arms conference in 1927.

Thought Price for Too Dear All Along, Bardo Asserts.

FINALLY SUCCUMBED TO OTHERS' WISHES

Later Realized He Held Hot Brick That Was Hard to Drop.

MERCHANT MARINE ACT LOBBYING BARED

$143,000 Spent for Bill, Is Testimony in Senate Propaganda Quiz.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The lament of a high pressure business man who claims he has been stung by a high pressure propagandist was intoned yesterday before the Senate subcommittee investigating naval lobbyists.

It was the story of C. L. Bardo, president of the New York Shipbuilding Co., a subsidiary of the American Brown-Boveri Electrical Corporation, one of the three shipbuilding firms that financed the now celebrated trip of William B. Shearer to the Geneva conference of 1927. It was Bardo's story—he is a massively built man with white hair and an almost babyish face, except when he looks squint-eyed at one—it was his story that he was never as enthusiastic about Shearer as were his fellows; that subsequently he had no warmth for him at all, and that later came the realization that he had hold of a hot brick that was hard to drop and finally such a feeling about him that it was with difficulty that he restrained himself before the committee, if he did.

And the suggestion, or this talk, about Shearer's wrecking the 1927 naval conference arouses guttural sounds in his throat.

Had Doubts at First.

That first day that he met Shearer, at a conference of shipbuilders in the office of a Mr. Hunter, their attorney in New York back on the eve of the Geneva conference, he looked Shearer over in his squint-eyed, business-like way and doubted seriously that what Shearer proposed to do at Geneva was worth $25,000, but then Shearer was a good talker and appeared to be a man who knew what he was talking about. So Bardo went along with his fellows, F. B. Whalen, of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., and S. W. Wakeman, of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. Later, when Shearer's reports came in, he saw but two or three; the bulk of them were filed away as "bunk" by his secretary, and he was convinced that Shearer had been paid too much.

Then one day when he happened to see in a New York newspaper, after the conference, that Shearer was going to disclose the inside of the Geneva debacle and that he was representing himself—then as having been at Geneva for American patriotic societies, he became convinced that Shearer should have never been employed at all. He is more convinced today.

Finally Ended Services.

He turned Shearer over in his mind several times after the newspaper articles, he said, explaining that a man "can't ride two horses at the same time," and finally in February, 1928, a letter was written to Shearer, here at the time, terminating his services.

But Shearer continued to bob up. It was, in fact, about this time that another phase of the Brown-Boveri's activities developed, the financing of the Trans-Oceanic Co., whose purpose, it may be remembered, was to establish a four day Transatlantic passenger service, and to do this there had to be changes made in the merchant

PANIC IN CABARET FIRE FATAL TO 18

47 Are Injured When Blaze Sweeps Night Club at Detroit.

SIX INQUIRIES STARTED

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Eighteen dead and 47 injured tonight was the casualty record of the flames and smoke that early this morning swept through the Study Club, a cabaret, in East Vernor highway that for a year has been one of the bright centers of Detroit night life. Ten men and eight women made up the death list. The injured were scattered in half a dozen hospitals, many too seriously injured to tell of their experiences.

Six separate investigations were under way by State and city departments, but the cause of the fire that sent scores of men and women into two small rooms in the rear of the second-floor dining room, there to be trampled, burned and suffocated, still was undetermined. Thirty men and women, battered and bruised, were found piled in one of the rooms, a dressing room. A woman's rest room, opposite the dressing room, was the other trap for which the panic-stricken dancers and diners dashed when the flames swept around the dining room.

The two rooms and the main stairway furnished the only means of egress, and the stairway was curtained with flame. Windows of the hall had been sealed to conform with the scheme of decoration. The supposition of Gabriel S. Goldwater, fire marshal, was that a carelessly thrown cigaret or match started the fire, and that the shout of "fire" caused the panic that followed.

"If there had been one man in the place who could have kept his head, this need not have happened," said Martin Cohn, proprietor of the club. Cohn was ordered held after he had made a statement to Duncan C. McCrea, assistant prosecuting attorney.

"There is evidence of criminal negligence here and I am going to find out who is responsible," said McCrea. He referred to the Study Club, a two-story building on the edge of Detroit's downtown district and only a short distance from Woodward avenue, the main street, as a fire trap.

The fire broke out in the dining room and found ready fuel in the

PEACOX JURY HEARS RED HEAD ALIBI GIRL

Sordid Story of Confessed Slayer's Dance Hall Companion Told.

THREATS ARE RELATED

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—A red-headed woman of easy friendships was taken out of jail today to testify that Earl Peacox, now on trial for killing his wife, had told her two months before the killing that he planned to "get" Mrs. Peacox.

It was a sordid story this woman, known both as Frances Murray and Frances Newman, told, and one that kept the crowded courtroom tensely quiet.

When Earl Peacox, 21-year-old radio technician, was left by his wife, he sought consolation in a New York City dance hall. Here he met Frances Newman and her "boy friend," spoken of at this trial as Willie.

Several times the two met and last March she went to the Peacox apartment in Mount Vernon, the apartment in which he admitted killing his wife in April and from which he carried her body to a nearby woods, later to set it on fire.

"That night," Miss Newman said today, after being brought to the courtroom from the jail where she has been held since a few days after the slaying as a material witness, "I learned for the first time that Earl was married."

"I asked him if there was any danger of my getting in trouble by being there, and he said his wife had left him and never came back.

"He said she was living with some one in New York, and if he ever met up with them he was apt to finish them both."

During cross-examination it was brought out that Peacox had said something about his wife living with two men.

"Didn't he mean those two men when he spoke of finishing both?" defense counsel asked.

"He was speaking of his wife at the time," she said.

The defense obtained from her the statement that she had never heard Peacox make any other threats, but on redirect examination she was shown notes to the district attorney in her own writing which seemed to refresh her memory.

"Earl never talked to me much about his wife," she said. "But I

$94,670.92 WATER BALANCE IS HIDDEN

Department Reported but $28,012.71 on Hand, Says Auditor.

APPROPRIATIONS SOUGHT

By AUSTIN T. ROGERS.

Although the Water Department carried over a debit balance on paper of $28,012.71 into the current fiscal year which started July 1, there is actually a cash balance available of $94,670.92, it was revealed yesterday by Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor.

This cash surplus resulted from credits by unobligated appropriations of 1928 and 1929 amounting to $122,683.65. According to the auditor's estimates, it is predicted that the credit balance at the close of the present fiscal year will amount to $104,065.92, exclusive of unobligated balances of the 1930 appropriations, while the balance at the end of the 1931 fiscal year should be $153,765.92.

To this sum may be added such unexpended portions of the appropriations as may remain available, although it is believed that these additional cash balances will not be large by reason of the fact that no major special appropriations are included for these two years. The present cash balance is the result chiefly of the fact that more than $38,000 was returned to the water fund as unexpended from the appropriation of $700,000 for the Rock Creek main, and $40,000 was left when the Water Department was relieved of the necessity of repaving the roadway after repairing the M street main.

In the M street instance it developed that the Highway Department had already made plans to resurface the street, so that the Water Department was spared the expense which would ordinarily have devolved upon

STIMSON EXTENDS NAVY NEGOTIATION

Meets Claudel on Initiating Parleys With Envoys of Three Other Powers.

DEMANDS ARE COMPLEX

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Stimson yesterday initiated conferences with the diplomatic representatives in Washington of the three naval powers which are to be invited to join with the United States and Great Britain in a seapower limitation conference next January.

His first talk was with Paul Claudel, the French Ambassador, and it was indicated that there would be conversations later with the Japanese and Italian Ambassadors.

Neither the Secretary of State nor the French diplomat would discuss the meeting. Since the invitations to the conference are to be issued by the British government, there was speculation as to what the subject matter had been.

France, Japan and Italy have been kept informed of the Anglo-American negotiations for limitation of cruiser, destroyer and submarine fleets. Consummation of this agreement of necessity depends on the attitude of the other three powers.

While the Japanese government is seeking an increase in its ratio with respect to all classes of naval ships, as compared to that of the United States and Great Britain, the expectation generally is that her proposals will present comparatively little difficulty for the projected conference.

Unless the French government has had a very extensive change of view since the 1921 arms conference, its proposals regarding submarines will present a complex situation.

At the Washington conference the French demanded at least 90,000 tons of submarines and this led to an im-

Policeman Charges Nurse Was Slain and Faces Trial

Stormy Petrel Declares Superiors Negligent in 'Suicide' Quiz.

ROBERT J. ALLEN.

Policeman Robert J. Allen, stormy petrel of the local police force, declared last night that he could prove Virginia McPherson was murdered, and charged that she was officially adjudged a suicide only because the homicide squad suppressed evidence and because the coroner's jury was "stupid and negligent."

Mrs. McPherson, a young graduate nurse, was found strangled in her apartment at the Park Lane Apartment House last week by her estranged husband. Around her neck was knotted a pajama cord. The homicide squad held that it was a case of suicide, as did the coroner's jury.

By his sensational statement of last night, a statement in which he

Howard Boys to Escort MacDonald Girl on Visit

Sir Esme's Sons, Francis and Edmund, Will "Take Care of Her Odd Moments," Says Embassy Attache; Younger Diplomatic Set Awaits Ishbel.

(Associated Press.)

Ishbel MacDonald will find two fellow Britons of her own age at her command in any spare moment during the visit here with her prime minister father.

The two young men are sons of Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, Francis and Edmund. Ishbel has never met them. They are coming to the embassy to be present during her stay, and it was said there yesterday that they would "take care of all Miss MacDonald's odd moments."

Ishbel probably will be escorted by them to the new embassy just being completed, and in the garden there she may plant a tree. An embassy attache, who is seeking to arrange this, described the 23-year-old girl as "small and brown-eyed and very fair."

Naturally inclined more toward things serious than toward things social, he said, she nevertheless has been her father's political hostess since her mother's death in 1911.

Whether she will want to dance or ride or drive has been a matter of conjecture. Whatever she chooses, though, the two sons of the ambassador will be waiting to escort her.

Both are in Wyoming now at the ranch of the Earl of Portsmouth. Edmund came from Oxford for a vacation several months ago, and Francis, who has lived in the United States marine act. One of these changes provided for the Government's lending money to ambitious shipping firms at a low rate of interest.

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

The changes were made in the Jones-White merchant marine act of last year. Lawrence N. Wilder was placed in charge of the Trans-Oceanic Co., his base was established here and his point of attack was Congress. The four-day service finally drifted from the front pages.

Lobbying Is Admitted.

Bardo readily admitted, in fact, that his firm spent some $143,000 in lobbying for the Jones-White bill, but $41,000 of it was reimbursed by other shipbuilding firms, the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. and the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., and firms standing to benefit from the sale of auxiliary equipment that goes into the making of ships, the Westinghouse Manufacturing Corporation and the General Electric.

But one of the first things Wilder wanted when he began operations here was that Bardo introduce him to Shearer. Bardo insisted that he tried to talk Wilder out of this, saying he told him that Shearer was unreliable," but Wilder met him anyway and he supposed that Shearer received money from Wilder, of which he, Bardo, knows nothing.

Then in digging around in his files after Shearer had filed suit recently against the three shipbuilding firms for $250,000 for services claimed to have been rendered at Geneva, Bardo learned that back in 1926 Shearer had been paid $7,500 for propaganda services in connection with a drive to build up the merchant marine. Building up of the merchant marine, Bardo pointed out, was in line with the Shipping Board's policy. And Shearer also got $5,200 from the Transoceanic Fund for going to California and trying to interest William Randolph Hearst in the four-day passenger service plan.

Pamphlet Expense Paid.

There was one other item of which Bardo knew, a payment by the three shipbuilding firms of $225 to reimburse Shearer for the expense he had gone to in having published a pamphlet entitled "The Cloak of Benedict Arnold."

Bardo said he would not stand for the circulation of this pamphlet. In his suit filed in New York Shearer claimed he had gotten $50,000 out of the shipbuilding companies, but Bardo said the items he had listed were all he knew about. He was under the impression that the Newport News firm had given Shearer some more money.

Throughout his testimony Bardo insisted that Shearer was sent to Geneva as an "observer and a reporter," and that he had no authority to do anything else. Bardo, in fact, leaned to the belief that he had done nothing at all, not even the job for which he was assigned.

He insisted, too, that the shipbuilders—that his firm, at least—was interested in only the "trend" of the conferences, not in its result.

He persisted in this stand through the despairing entreaties of Senator Shortridge, of the most solemn mien and with his hands frequently outturned in front of him as if to sweep away all misunderstandings of men and confusion of words. He stuck to it through Senator Robinson's gruff insistence that he did not see how a "trend" could keep from leading to a result.

Questioned All Day.

The two senators kept at him all the morning on this question, and also as to why he would pay one-third of $25,000 for a job and then not be interested in the reports that came in. And in the afternoon they returned to their task. Finally Bardo, pounding on the table with his heavy fist, declared:

"I didn't care whether they decided on 8-inch guns, 10-inch guns or pop guns. What I wanted was for them to reach an agreement so that the shipbuilding industry would know where it stood."

He explained that at the time of Shearer's employment for the Geneva conference his firm—he was then vice president of the parent firm, the Brown-Boverei Electrical Corporation—was faced with the question of whether it should equip its plant to handle electrical work or to build ships.

"There was the question, for example," he said, "of installing one machine alone, the foundation of which would have cost $60,000 to build."

Disappointed By Parley, Claim.

At the time his company had just been invited to bid on two cruisers, he said, but he expressed the opinion that they would not have been involved in any agreement at Geneva. He insisted that the outcome of the conference was a disappointment to him.

"I wanted an agreement," he insisted. "I wanted the question settled and that was my only concern. We thought Shearer could give us the 'trend' that would not appear in the regular newspaper reports. He was our observer, a hired man."

Shortridge engaged him in a discussion of patriotism. There was an American flag in the room and one person in the audience seemed to be the living image of "The Spirit of America." There also was Frederick K. Libbey, the pacifist, who enjoyed it immensely every time Bardo took a crack at Shearer.

Shearer Is Present.

Shearer was there, too, with his attorney, Daniel H. Cohalan of New York; Shearer of domineering mien with his arms folded across his chest and apparently enjoying it as much as Libbey. At the outset of the hearing Cohalan addressed the committee, asserting that it owned it to such a patriotic man as his client, one who had served in two wars, to hear him first.

Shortridge eyed him over his spectacles and then told him that the committee had decided to proceed otherwise.

Robinson kept calling attention to letters in the mass of correspondence that was introduced, in which Shearer frequently intimated he had done more than observe at Geneva, and he wanted to know why Bardo did not challenge some of these statements at some time or another. Bardo's answer gave Libbey his greatest laugh.

Saw Nothing to Be Gained.

"Senator," he said, "I was raised on a farm, and I learned early that there is nothing to be gained from a hand-to-hand encounter with a skunk—not that I would call Mr. Shearer a skunk, of course, but——" Further questions interrupted the completion of his thought.

Bardo made it quite plain that he was definitely "through" with Shearer now. "He is an undesirable man to have around," Bardo said.

"What do you mean by that?" Robinson asked.

"Well, you might send him after the cows and he might take a gun and shoot the farmers' pigeons," Bardo replied.

The secretary-treasurer of the American Brown-Boveri Electrical Co., Norman R. Parker, also was heard. Senator Shortridge found a kindred soul in this quiet-mannered, soft-voiced man, a fellow gentleman and scholar, and together they discussed pleasantly checks and other financial records that figured in the Shearer transaction.

Schwab to Be Heard Today.

Charles M. Schwab is to be heard today. Senator Shortridge also said he planned to call Wilder and other transoceanic workers in connection with the Jones-White bill lobby.

Of the $143,000 that was spent on this lobby, as revealed by Bardo, $24,000 went for hotel bills and entertainment here, and $6,089 went to the National Broadcasting Co. for radio service. It was Senator Allen, of Kansas, who developed this expenditure.

Chairman Hale, of the Senate naval affairs committee, sat in on the hearing as an "observer."

LEAGUE TO DELAY ANTIWAR MOVE

Covenant May Be Changed Next Year to Ban All Conflicts.

COMMITTEE WILL ACT

Geneva, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Revision of the League of Nations covenant to conform with the Kellogg-Briand pact, a forward step in the world movement against war, will not be accomplished in the present session of the league assembly, despite the fact that it is supported by prevailing opinion there. It may become a fact next year.

The assembly's committee on constitutional questions voted late today to refer this proposal to a special committee which will prepare and present it to the eleventh assembly.

The committee agreed that there was no juridical need for modifying the covenant, since it does not conflict with the agreement outlawing war, but the members believed formal modification was politically desirable.

Committee to Meet.

The special committee, composed of 11 members, will meet on the first quarter of 1930 to draft the required alterations in the famous document which is the charter of the league.

Plans for a world economic conference of all nations, both members and nonmembers of the league, reached concrete form in the committee on technical organizations this afternoon. The committee will recommend that the assembly adopt procedure which provides for five stages.

The first is an invitation to all states to intimate before December 31, 1929, whether they will participate in a diplomatic conference for concluding a tariff truce and for establishing a program of negotiations to reduce hindrances to trade by collective agreement.

The second stage is decision by the Council of the League on the basis of these replies whether the diplomatic conference shall be held. If its decision is affirmative, the conference will be held probably toward the end of January, 1930.

Actual Conference.

The third stage is the actual holding of the conference; the fourth, negotiations extending over a long period and aiming at collective agreements; and the fifth, a final diplomatic conference to consider the results and supplement them if necessary.

A sharp clash between the British and French in the disarmament committee over the British proposal reopening the question of trained army reserves did not reach a vote, but brought forth tonight a proposal for a compromise.

Drafted by M. Politis, of Greece, the proposed compromise reads in part:

"The assembly, urging the necessity of accomplishing the first step toward reduction and limitation of armaments with as little delay as possible, hopes the preparatory commission will shortly be able to resume the work interrupted at the last session with a view to framing a preliminary draft convention as soon as possible."

The disarmament committee will attempt to dispose of the question tomorrow morning.

Riot Rumors Rife On Arab Sabbath

Moslem Boy Is Reported Stabbed; British Say Country Calm.

Jerusalem, Sept. 20 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—The fifth Friday, the Moslem Sabbath, after the outbreak of riots found the state of mind of the Palestine population, both Jewish and Arab, far from calm. Wild rumors were current here hours before the villagers from the vicinity were to assemble in the Mosque of Omar for their weekly prayers. These were that a well-planned attack on the Jews would be made.

An incident yesterday on the Jaffa road tended to increase the alarm. An Arab youth was reported stabbed by an unidentified assailant.

The official view held here is that complete quiet has been restored throughout the country.

Girl Novelist, 15, Held as Runaway

Aversion to School Caused Her to Leave Friends, Says Barbara Follett.

San Francisco, Calif., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—A desire for freedom and an aversion to school led Barbara Newhall Follett, child novelist, of New Haven, Conn., to leave her friends in Los Angeles and come to San Francisco, she told Juvenile Court authorities today. She is held at the detention home for Los Angeles officers.

Miss Follett, 15 years old, was arrested last night at a local hotel on a telegraphic warrant from Los Angeles.

Advices from Los Angeles said the girl's detention had been requested by friends. She will be returned to that city and released to "responsible parties," it was said. Both the girl and officers declined to make known who the "parties" are.

Miss Follett is the daughter of Wilson Follett, a writer. She had recently returned from the Hawaiian Islands.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS AT RECEPTION

William Forsythe, Post Staff Photographer.

BESIEGED SUSPECT BALKS ARMED POSSE

Former Convict Barricades Self in Home and Defies Pursuers.

FIRES OCCASIONAL SHOTS

Fort Smith, Ark., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Behind the corrugated bullet-proof walls of his mountain home in Franklin County, from which he was routed once before by the National Guard, Neil McLaughlin, 42, a former convict, tonight held off officers of three counties who sought to arrest him on a statutory charge.

McLaughlin, who at one time was under a death sentence for a statutory offense and later gained a commutation to life imprisonment, then a full pardon, has been barricaded in his home with his wife and children since last midnight.

Franklin County officers who went to arrest him were met with gunfire. Sebastian and Crawford County officers today were called to their assistance, but McLaughlin continued to hold them off with occasional firing. His home is a corrugated iron affair and is full of portholes. It stands on a hill and commands a view from every side.

In the same structure in 1926 McLaughlin, charged at that time also with a statutory offense, barricaded himself for days. The National Guard eventually was called out and McLaughlin surrendered. He was tried and acquitted.

At the last term of court at Ozark, when he was to be tried on another statutory charge and a pistol carrying charge, he was said to have waylaid the prosecuting witness and attacked him with the barrel of a gun. He was under bond at the time and the bond was forfeited. It is upon these charges he now is sought.

McLaughlin was sentenced in 1915 to die. He first gained a stay of sentence, then a commutation to life imprisonment. Then he escaped from the penitentiary. In 1922 he startled penitentiary officials by walking in and surrendering. The same day he made a personal plea to Gov. Charles M. Brough for a pardon, which was granted.

Gen. Betancourt Feted at Embassy

Veterans of Spanish War Join Dr. Jose Baron in Welcome.

Dr. Jose T. Baron, charge d'affairs of the Cuban Embassy, and leading Spanish-American War veterans held a reception yesterday afternoon at the Cuban Embassy for Gen. Pedro A. Betancourt, oldest surviving general of the Cuban War for Independence.

The veterans and guests were welcomed by Dr. Baron and presented to Gen. Betancourt. James E. Maynard, past department commander, acted as master of ceremonies. Rice W. Means, past commander in chief and former senator from Colorado, welcomed the distinguished guest to the Capital and extended the good wishes of the veterans to him and the President of Cuba.

Gen. Betancourt, in response, expressed appreciation for the courtesies shown him here and referred particularly to the comradeship shown him at the national encampment of veterans at Denver recently.

GIRL, THROAT CUT, IS FOUND IN RIVER

Child, 11, Attacked on Way to School; Face Is Badly Bruised.

STONE BOUND TO LEG

King Hill, Idaho, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—The body of 11-year-old Marie West, her throat cut, was found in the edge of the Snake River near here today, 26 hours after she left home to come to school here. The girl had been criminally assaulted.

The body was found sunk in 2 feet of water, weighted down by a stone bound to the child's leg by a wire. Besides the cut on her throat, her face was bruised from blows.

The little girl, adopted from a Boise orphans' home only a year ago by Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Miesenzahl, who live 3½ miles west of King Hill, left home yesterday morning for school, following her usual course along the railroad track.

That was the last time she was seen.

The first hint of her fate was discovery by officers of a trail broken through the weeds and willows leading from the railroad track to the river, at this point separated only about 40 feet. Following this they came upon a pool of blood and later saw the body underneath the water.

A search had been conducted all night for the child after her foster mother notified officers that she was missing. Several times searching parties had passed in the dark within a few feet of the body, blotting out all traces of the direction the child's assailant had taken.

Only one bare clew as to the identity of her assailant has been found, A. A. Stevens, sheriff of Elmore County, said tonight. Shortly after the child left home a man was seen by a motorist walking along the right-of-way in the vicinity of the scene of the crime.

The child had evidently been seized from the railroad right-of-way about 100 feet from the clump of willows on the edge of the river near where the body was found, for at this point her lunch basket was found.

Friends of John Coolidge Sing Bachelor Swan Song

Son of Former President Is Honored at Traditional Dinner at Inn Near Town Where He Will Wed Florence Trumbull.

Plainville, Conn., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Eleven friends of Maj. John Coolidge sang the swan-song to his bachelorhood with him tonight.

They did this at a quietly arranged bachelor dinner in the Elm Tree Inn at Farmington, 4 miles from here. Unaware that his friends had prepared this traditional function, Coolidge, who will marry Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of Gov. John H. Trumbull of Connecicut here Monday afternoon, went with them to the inn. There the son of former President Calvin Coolidge found himself the guest of honor at a dinner.

Even the proprietor of the inn did not know for whom the dinner had been arranged until he recognized the frequently photographed face of Coolidge among twelve young men ranged around a table.

Besides the guest of honor, the others were Stephen Brown, of Northampton, Mass., who is to be best man at the wedding; Philip Morehouse, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who is to be an usher; Nathan White, jr., of New Taven; Emory L. Mallett and Arthur Buahnell, of Hartford, and Wooster B. Williams, John B. Minor, jr., Eldred Minor, Eric Waldo, Donald Edwards and Pierce U. Clark, of Plainville. Clark also is to be an usher.

Tomorrow afternoon Coolidge will be here for a rehearsal of the marriage with his fiances and the bridal party. The rehearsal will begin with the trip from the Trumbull home to Plainville Congregational Church, and the entire ceremony will be performed.

State policemen will be on duty at the church to guard the bridal party from intruders, to assure the couple the privacy which they desire.

EVERSON TO BE HEAD OF MILITIA BUREAU

Indiana National Guard Officer to Have Rank of Major General.

AWARDED WAR CITATION

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover yesterday appointed Brig. Gen. William Graham Everson, of the Indiana National Guard, as chief of the Militia Bureau of the War Department. Later the nomination was formally transmitted to the Senate.

Gen. Everson, whose home is in Muncie, will have the rank of major general. He succeeds Maj. Gen. Creed C. Hammond, of Oregon, who was appointed auditor general of the Philippines in June. Everson is a World War veteran and was awarded the meritorious service citation certificate by Gen. Pershing.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Brig. Gen. W. G. Everson, who today was appointed by President Hoover as chief of the Militia Bureau of the War Department, is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Muncie, Ind. He recently was named adjutant general of Indiana by Gov. Harry G. Leslie.

Gen. Everson has seen long service in the Indiana National Guard, from a corporal in the Spanish-American War to lieutenant colonel of the 332d Infantry in the World War.

Attaches of the governor's office expressed the belief that Gen. Everson would resign as adjutant general of Indiana in accepting the Militia Bureau post.

Gov. Leslie was a guest at the White House Wednesday night.

Former Danish Pastor Marries Governess

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—The Rev. John P. Ingerslew, whose charges against Bishop Anton Bast while Rev. Mr. Ingerslew was pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Copenhagen, Denmark, resulted in the ousting of the bishop, today was married to Miss Lissa Madsen, 23, who for three years has been governess to the three Ingerslew children.

The bride has lived with the family since the death of the first Mrs. Ingerslew three years ago. The minister recently was assigned to a pastorate at Grant City, Mo. Bishop Bast was convicted of misuse of church funds and besides being ousted from the church, served a term in a prison in Denmark.

U. S. Recalls Ships In Foreign Waters

Last of Naval Forces Are Ordered Home by Secretary Adams.

(Associated Press).

The practice of keeping American naval forces in European waters has been suspended indefinitely.

Secretary Adams said yesterday that the Government deemed it unnecessary to maintain warships at the European station at the present time. Should it be considered advisable to resume the practice, he added, there would be no hesitancy in dispatching ships.

Since the World War, he said, this Government, which kept warships in European waters principally for diplomatic purposes, had been gradually withdrawing them. Since January, 1928, when a squadron of destroyers were withdrawn, a light cruiser, the Raleigh, alone has remained and this was recently recalled.

Withdrawal of the Raleigh discontinued the title of vice admiral held by Rear Admiral John H. Dayton, who since has requested retirement because of 40 years of service.

Embargo Treaty Sped To Geneva by Senate

(Associated Press.)

Special messengers rushed the treaty for abolishment of international embargoes, ratified Thursday by the Senate, toward Geneva yesterday in order to get it there by September 30, the last day for the deposit of the document.

The official paper was hurriedly drafted overnight, dispatched to President Hoover for signature early yesterday and turned over to a special messenger for transportation to New York by a late afternoon train. It was consigned to the Olympic, sailing at midnight. Unless deposited by September 30, the treaty, signed at Geneva two years ago by leading nations of the world, fails to become operative.

$30,000,000 STOCK COUP ROCKS LONDON

Head of Seven Companies and Three Aids Arrested as Market Collapses.

SHARES CUT OFF BOARD

London, Sept. 20 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The biggest financial sensation since the war culminated today in the suspension by the stock exchange committee of dealings in seven stocks controlled by Clarence C. Hatry, whose companies lost $30,000,000 in value in three days before the unprecedented action of the committee in ruling them temporarily off the board.

A few hours after this action was taken Hatry and three of his codirectors, Edmund Daniels, Albert Edward Taber and John Graham Dixon, were arrested. Hatry is spending tonight in a cell on a technical charge of obtaining money through conspiracy.

In reality, the charges made involve the biggest conspiracy accusations ever brought against a financier here. It is feared in the city (the London financial district) that no assets worth mentioning are owned by the Hatry companies. Long after the stock exchange closed today crowds surrounded it, making anxious inquiries. The Marquess of Winchester, chairman of several Hatry companies, said, "I am not in the least worried by recent events. Nothing ever troubles me."

When representatives of the director of public prosecutions first called at Hatry's luxurious Mayfair home, just off Park lane and equipped with an expensive swimming pool, the financier had disappeared. The servants said they were under a week's notice.

Cutter, Rum Ship Stage Duel on Lake Ontario

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Five hundred shots were exchanged in a running machine gun battle between a Coast Guard cutter and a steel armored ale runner on Lake Ontario, four miles off Pultneyville Wayne County, early today.

A report of the encounter was made by Motor Machinist's Mate Hollin Veley, commander of the Government boat, upon its return to the Summerville Coast Guard station, near here, a few hours later. No one was injured as far as is known. The smuggler, the speedier craft, made her getaway, the coast guardsmen reported.

25 Textbook Firms Indicted for Gifts

Trial of Gov. Sampson in Kentucky Is Set for October 2.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—With Gov. Flem D. Sampson and seven members of the State textbook commission under indictment, true bills were returned late today by the Franklin County grand jury against 25 textbook companies, charging them with making "unlawful gifts" to members of the commission.

The governor and the seven members were indicted yesterday on charges of having received gifts from the companies, the gifts being several hundred specimen copies of textbooks sent each of the indicted commission members. Three of them said today they had sold all or part of their specimen copies for sums that ranged up to $325.

Judge Ben G. Williams fixed the bond of each company at $250, the same amount as the bond of Gov. Sampson and the others. No date for trial was set.

Gov. Sampson's trial was set earlier for October 2, after the governor waived formal examination, entered a plea of not guilty, and requested an early hearing.

"Coquette" Actors Win Wage Dispute

Colleagues of Helen Hayes Are Paid for Role in Play She Quit.

New York, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Sidestepping the question whether Helen Hayes' approaching motherhood constituted an "act of God," three arbitrators today ordered Jed Harris, producer, to pay two weeks' salaries to five actors in the cast of "Coquette."

Miss Hayes, wife of Charles MacArthur, playwright and author, starred in "Coquette," but she recently left the cast. Harris thereupon discontinued the play in London and refused the demands of the five actors for two weeks' salary in lieu of notice, pointing out that their Equity contracts said employers could not be responsible for an "act of God."

The arbitrators held that the contracts did not "limit the actors to perform with Helen Hayes"—that Harris could have found another star to replace Miss Hayes.

Man, Thought Suicide, And Wife Die in Fire

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Mrs. Edith Green, 52, was found slain in the kitchen of her farm home three miles south of Parma at 8 a. m. today. A barn in the rear of the house was in flames. In the debris of the barn firemen found the charred body of a man thought to be Harold Green, 53, her husband.

Mrs. Green's body was found beneath the wheels of a baby carriage in which her 5-year-old grandchild lay. A hammer and a broken razor were at her side. The child was uninjured. The body found in the barn had a burned portion of rope about the neck and officers said they believed the man had set fire to the barn and then hanged himself.

Power Company Stock In Paper to Be Sold

Boston, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Announcement was made tonight by the management of the Boston Herald and Traveler that the International Paper & Power Co. interests today agreed to sell all their stock in the papers to a group of bankers acting with the present management of the papers.

Adams to Sponsor Naval Works Bill

Measure for $15,000,000 Would Permit Important Building to Go On.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Adams intends to sponsor the $15,000,000 naval public works bill which failed to pass in the last Congress.

The measure would authorize him to proceed with construction work at navy yards, stations and bases, he said, which has been needed for some time. He said he hopes for passage of the measure at the next regular session.

Among the important allotments in the bill are $1,535,000 for the Puget Sound Navy Yard; $2,339,000 for Pearl Harbor naval station, Hawaii; $1,950,000 for Marine barracks, Quantico, Va., and $1,501,500 for naval station, San Diego, Calif.

TWO MEN SOUGHT IN ARTIST SLAYING

Whiteside Neighbor Tells of Suspects She Saw Running Away.

AUTHOR'S WIFE IS ILL

Philadelphia, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Two young men, one white and the other a negro, were sought tonight as the slayers of Frank Reed Whiteside, landscape artist and treasurer of the Fellowship of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts and of the Philadelphia Sketch Club.

Whiteside, who was 63, was shot to death on the steps of his home last night as he answered a ring on an old-fashioned pull bell. The bullet pierced his heart.

Two clews led to a city-wide search for the supposed slayers. Mrs. S. R. Carey, who occupies a second-floor apartment about a block from the Whiteside home, told the authorities that about the time the artist was shot she had seen two men, clad in dark clothes and wearing caps, running along the street. As they passed her house, Mrs. Carey said, "one of them threw something into an open cellar window."

Police found in the cellar a leather key case containing ten keys belonging to Whiteside.

The police theory is that two men had rung Mr. Whiteside's doorbell with the intention of holding him up. The artist either did not understand them because of his deafness, or had attempted to disregard their pistols and drive them away. One of the robbers, alarmed by Whiteside's defiance, it is thought, fired the fatal shot and hurriedly searched the victim's pockets, taking out the key case and a small amount of money.

Whiteside's pockets had been turned inside out, but a gold watch and a gold cigar lighter were not taken. He was alone in the house. His wife is convalescingfromase ri o His wife is convalescing from a serious illness at a resort in Maine.

Day in Congress

SENATE.

Met at noon and recessed at 5:22 to noon today.

Continued consideration of the tariff. Majority Leader Watson announced that President Hoover would take no part in tariff making so long as the bill is in its legislative stage.

Voted to restore to the bill a House provision making Canadian wheat, milled in bond in the United States for export to Cuba, pay a duty equal to the amount of tariff preference Cuba grants American flour.

The naval investigating subcommittee was told by Clinton L. Bardo, president of the New York Shipbuilding Co., that three shipbuilders entered into a verbal agreement with William B. Shearer, naval propagandist, to represent them at the Geneva arms reduction conference as an "observer."

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

OH, ho! So Gen. Smedley Butler and the Marines are on the march again. You can hear their tramping feet, the swish of their swinging arms, the restless energy of them. Here today and there tomorrow, the happy-go-lucky fellows, who according to their stirring marching song "From the Halls of Montezuma," will even be present in heaven when the roll is called up yonder!

Yes, sir; they're on the move. The girls are weeping and waving; there are the pathetic farewells. But the face of them is toward the front; they look neither to the right nor left. Theirs is a duty to be done. Their chests are thrown way out.

* * * *

BUT what war, for the name of goodness, are they going to now? Back to Nicaragua, back to Nanking to save a situation there, or back to Chateau Thierry to save the world for democracy? Or are they going out again to guard the mails, en route with the seal of Uncle Sam?

No, it can't be that they are on any of these bents. They have no rifles on their shoulders or sabers in their scabbards. There is Butler himself at the head, without any sidearms. All he has, in fact, is his hat, which he doffs and waves to the admiring, or maybe it's the terror-stricken, populace.

The man is on no bloody intent. That is perfectly apparent. His face has the light of a crusader, there is a halo about his head, and an angelic look on the faces of the troopers stepping rhythmically behind him.

AH, IT becomes clear now, the mission of these Devil Dogs. It becomes clear as they round the corner and come out of the dust.

They are out to drive the six bootleggers from Quantico. This place will be made safe for the prohibitionists or Butler and his Marines will know the reason why. Fitful white ribbons will hang from the town's telephone poles, and one great white ribbon will be stretched the length of the main street. Ice cream and soda pop will grace such throats as have heretofore known the gurgle of Virginia moonshine, the Baccardi rum of Nicaragua and the cognac of France.

These delicacies will probably blush and be frightened as they go down, but the Marine is not a Marine unless he protects the weak, the little helpless things of Nature that are timid and afraid.

* * * *

THERE is getting to be the inescapable suggestion about Butler that he likes nothing better than a parade—a parade across the front page. He has been off in China so long that he must miss the publicity music that attended him day by day in Philadelphia when he struck out alone to dry that city up.

There is reason to believe that he will be more successful this time, because Quantico is smaller than Philadelphia and instead of working alone the general has his whole army behind him.

Last reports are that the six bootleggers are on the run, on their way to Washington, with the Marines right behind them, just as the Confederates chased the Federals that time.

This business ill befits the Marines, though. Because that Montezuma song of theirs, in addition to being a good marching tune, is a crackerjack hard-drinking song.

POLICEMAN CHARGES NURSE WAS SLAIN; TO FACE TRIAL

arrayed himself against both his superiors in the Police Department and the officials in the district attorney's office, Policeman Allen has now reached what probably will be a decisive stage in his sensational career.

The prospect now is that he either will go down in police annals as a master criminologist or as an ousted cop.

"They probably will get me this time," he said last night, "but they will know that I can fight."

The showdown will come when Allen is haled before the police trial board in connection with the McPherson case. He made the investigation privately on his own time. However, according to his commanding officer, Capt. William G. Stott, Allen was so absorbed in the case last Tuesday night that he was an hour late in reporting for duty at the Third Precinct.

Stott has charged Allen with conduct prejudicial to the good order and discipline of the force, the most serious charge that has ever been lodged against him. His record thus far is four appearances before the trial board and eight charges of traffic violations. He has been victorious in every case.

Allen, who first hit the front page when he arose at a mass meeting and told his brother officers to stop beating prisoners and drinking liquor, talks like a man who is used to appearing in public forums.

Offers to Prove Charge.

"I am convinced Mrs. McPherson was murdered," he said last night. "What is more I can prove it. I can produce witnesses to substantiate every bit of evidence I have in my possession.

"Lieut. Kelly and the other members of the homicide squad evidently started out with the theory that Mrs. McPherson was a suicide, and everything they produced in the way of evidence was aimed at strengthening that theory. Anything that was pertinent to the murder theory they suppressed.

"As for the coroner's jury, it was both stupid and negligent. Why was it that out of 30 or so witnesses, the jury called only one? Was that fair to this poor girl's reputation? Was it fair to her poor, harassed family?"

Makes Secret Visit.

Allen said he became interested in the case when certain persons approached him and gave him important information bearing on it. Last Sunday he secretly visited the apartment, he said, and was let in by Manager Ruff.

Four things, Allen said, convinced him that Mrs. McPherson had been murdered:

The position of her body in the apartment, the discovery of a pool of blood in the bathroom; the agonized cries that were heard on the night of her death, and the apparent impossibility of her having strangled herself.

"One of the first things I did," he said, "was to get a pajama cord similar to the one that was found around her neck. Then I got two girls about the same size as Mrs. McPherson. I offered them $15 if they could take the cord and choke their voices off. They tried and failed.

Nurse's Neck Cut.

"The physician who examined Mrs. McPherson said the cord was so tight that it had cut her neck in five places.

"She couldn't have tied that cord that tight. I defy any member of the homicide squad to tie a cord around his own neck as that cord was tied.

"Now, I was once a boxer and I am pretty strong, but I found it impossible to tie a cord around my neck as that girl is supposed to have done. Try it yourself and you will see."

(United States Attorney Rover points out that Mrs. McPherson was a nurse and that the knot was a surgical one such as she was trained to tie. Therefore, he believes that she knotted it herself.)

Taking up the question of the cries that were heard on the night of Mrs. McPherson's death, Allen said he could prove that these were not made by a woman on the tenth floor who was in labor pains.

Screams Near Room.

The janitor in the apartment house next door and a family he has interviewed, Allen said, are willing to swear that the noise came from the second floor, on which the McPherson apartment was located.

"The janitor was as near the McPherson apartment as you are to that radiator over there," Allen said. "He distinctly heard somebody say, 'Now leave me alone.' Then he heard groans. At first they were loud, and then they gradually subsided. The police, however, tried to make a liar out of the janitor."

The body was so near the door, Allen said, that he was convinced that the murderer made his escape through the window. About that time, he said, somebody was heard running down the street after which an automobile was heard to roar away.

Rover Tables Evidence.

After the inquest, Allen said, he took his information to District Attorney Rover and his assistant, William H. Collins, but got no cooperation whatever. Instead, he said, the police guard was removed from the McPherson apartment and valuable evidence lost.

In the meantime, Allen said, the secretary of Senator Overman, of North Carolina, summoned him and asked him for his evidence. This resulted in Overman, a friend of Mrs McPherson's father, asking Rover to continue his investigation.

Rover said yesterday that the investigation was being continued, but thus far nothing has been developed to warrant an arrest for murder. This morning Assistant United States Attorney Collins will confer with Senator Overman.

And Allen is waiting to be touched either by the wand of fame or the ax of the trial board.

it of resurfacing after tearing up the street.

For 1931 the Water Department has asked for a substantially larger appropriation than has been granted in previous years, and with minor exceptions these requests have been forwarded as approved to the Budget Bureau by the District Commissioners.

Although it had been previously intimated that the Water Department had requested an increase from $30,000 to $50,000 in its application for extension of meterization throughout the District, it was disclosed yesterday that the department has asked for only $30,000 for 1931, the same figure as has been granted for the last several years.

It has been the contention of the Water Department that the reason it was falling behind in its program of meterizing water consumption in the District 100 per cent was because it was not able to get sufficient funds for this purpose.

Appropriations for 1930.

Following are the appropriations asked for the coming year by the Water Department: Salaries, $179,890; maintenance and operation, $385,000; extension, $285,000; meters, $30,000; fireplugs, $50,000; replacement of mains, $90,000, and new mains, $45,000.

The total asked for by the Water Department for 1931 was $1,065,390. The total which the Commissioners approved was $1,498,300, which included the sum of $449,000 for the Washington Aqueduct, requested by Maj. Brehon N. Summervell, leaving a total of $16,090 disapproved from the Water Department's requests.

While no definite figures will be available under the laws until the proposed budget is presented to Congress, it is understood that this $16,090 was not deducted from any of the maintenance estimates of the department, so that the Water Department should have practically all the money it has asked for for its purposes during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931.

Although estimates show that the department will have a cash surplus of at least $153,765.92, it is pointed out that this will not necessarily provide the department with that much additional operating funds, for the reason that any enterprise doing a business of more than $1,500,000 annually must carry a balance of at least 10 per cent, it will, nevertheless, provide the Water Department with a sum within $16,000 of its own estimate of its requirements, and this, it is figured, should be sufficient to carry on the work of the department on a basis much more efficient than in recent years.

Huge Fund Needed.

In this connection, Maj. Donovan said yesterday:

"The water service, with appropriations of $1,500,000 a year, should have an operating cash fund on hand at all times of at least $150,000, independently of current collections. For this reason the appropriations made from the water fund should be computed in such amounts as to leave in that fund not less than that balance for operating expenses."

Strong agitation is now under way among District officials to have necessary changes made in the law to turn all revenues of the water department back into the general District fund and have the department draw its requirements from the general fund each year regardless of its own collections. In that way, the Water Department will be placed on a par with other District Governmental departments and will no longer be placed in a position of entire dependency upon its own collections.

It has long been the contention of the Water Department that the reason why it is unable to account for one-third of the annual consumption of water in the District, and why 14,000 meters, or one-fifth of all the District-owned meters in Washington, are inoperative, is that it has not had sufficient funds to carry on its operations with greater efficiency.

Capt. Hugh Oram, assistant engineer commissioner, yesterday reported that his study of the water situation as ordered by the commissioners is progressing rapidly, and that he will probably have his final report ready within the next two weeks, with several major recommendations.

VETERANS' HEAD

MAJ. GEN. JOHN J. CLEM, of Washington, known as the "Drummer Boy of Shiloh," was re-elected president of the Army of the Cumberland group of Civil War Veterans at the closing session of the encampment in Columbus, Ohio, yesterday, according to the Associated Press. Cincinnati was chosen the next meeting place.

some time, is connected with the J. P. Morgan interests.

Although Ishbel's program has not been prepared, and whatever is decided upon will be subject to her approval, embassy officials are quite certain she will visit Mount Vernon and Arlington. Among the young women members of diplomatic families whom she probably will meet are several who are close friends of the Howards—Elizabeth and Antoinette de Ligne, daughters of the Belgian Ambassador; Reine Claudel, the French Envoy's daughter, who went home some time ago, but is expected to return shortly, and Gilla Prochnik, the Austrian Envoy's daughter.

A skeleton of Ishbel's program of official functions will be ready about the middle of next week. On it certainly will appear a dinner at the embassy, to which about 40 guests will be invited, and perhaps a tea party. Too, she will surely spend some of the time, while her father conducts his official business, with Lady Isabella, wife of Sir Esme.

If she needs feminine counsel, Ishbel may receive it from Miss Gytha Sturton, Lady Isabella's personal secretary, who is English and widely known for her charm. Another woman will be in the MacDonald party, but she probably will be occupied most of the time with business. She is Miss Rosa Rosenberg, who has been one of the premier's secretaries for many years, and who handles many important matters for him.

Should conversation turn to world affairs, the Scotch girl will be completely at ease, for she has kept abreast of them efficiently as she has managed the three menages of her father—the house at Lossiemouth, that at Hampstead Heath, and Downing street.

Doubtless, too, she will give some time to considering, first hand, aspects of social conditions in this country and the economic and political factors that produce them, for she has done much social service work, and her background is such that she could draw upon it in public speeches on her father's behalf.

Because of her wide interests and capability, officials at the embassy said, Ishbel probably will go everywhere her father goes except to official naval conferences. She is her father's standby, and, in the words of embassy officials, "he likes to have her there."

MITCHELL DASHES SINCLAIR'S HOPES

Uges President to Refuse to Shorten His and Day's Jail Sentences.

FINDING OF COURT CITED

(Associated Press.)

Hopes of Harry F. Sinclair and Henry Mason Day, his aid, for commutation of their jail sentences for jury shadowing were dashed yesterday by Attorney General Mitchell, who recommended that President Hoover deny their application for executive clemency.

While the Attorney General's recommendation in the case is not final it is rarely that the President disregards his advice on pleas for clemency.

Sinclair Serving Six Months.

Sinclair is serving six months and Day four months after conviction for contempt of court for having employed detectives to shadow the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy jury. They filed applications for clemency in August.

The oil operator's term will expire November 22, while Day will be freed two weeks earlier.

Mitchell told the President he had read the record of the trial of Sinclair and Day and was convinced that when the oil operator had Day hire the detectives to shadow the jury during the conspiracy case they had a "sinister and ulterior purpose."

Mitchell Cites Court Finding.

The Attorney General said that although Sinclair had been acquitted at a subsequent trial of having conspired with Albert B. Fall to defraud the Government in the lease of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve, other Federal courts, including the Supreme Court, had held in a suit involving the same lease that Sinclair was a "party to a corrupt and dishonest agreement with Fall."

Mitchell also told the President that in his opinion to grant clemency to Sinclair and Day would undermine the confidence of the public in the administration of justice. When Hoover will act on the adverse recommendation was a matter of speculation last night.

Knife Assault Suspect Held.

Hudson Groover, 36 years old, colored, of 2625 Sherman avenue northwest, was arrested last night on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon on James Morton, of 1410 Columbia street northwest, on the night of September 9. He was apprehended by Detective A. N. Tolson, of the Ninth Precinct. Morton is still in Freedmen's Hospital with several severe wounds inflicted by a knife.

Twenty-seven Republicans joined 24 Democrats in voting against the committee amendment to strike out, while 3 Democrats voted with 15 Republicans for striking out.

Roll-Call Tabulation.

Republicans for the amendment to strike out: Couzens, Dale, Deneen, Gillett, Greene, Hale, Hastings, Keyes, McNary, Reed, Shortridge, Smoot, Steiwer, Warren, Watson—Total, 15.

Democrats for: Dill, Wagner, Walsh (Mass.)—Total, 3. Grand total, 18.

Republicans against striking out: Allen, Blaine, Borah, Brookhart, Capper, Cutting, Fess, Frazier, Glenn, Goff, Goldsborough, Hatfield, Howell, Johnson, Jones, Kean, La Follette, McMaster, Norris, Nye, Oddie, Patterson, Pine, Schall, Thomas (Idaho), Vandenburg, Walcott—Total, 27. Democrats against striking out—Ashurst, Black, Blease, Bratton, Brock, Connally, Fletcher, George, Glass, Harris, Hawes, Heflin, Kendrick, McKellar, Overman, Pittman, Ransdell, Robinson (Ark.), Sheppard, Simmons, Steck, Swanson, Thomas (Okla.), Walsh (Mont.)—Total, 24. Grand total, 51.

After this vote the Senate also rejected a committee amendment closely related to the milling-in-bond provision to strike out the House provision denying the existing 99 per cent drawback on duty-paid wheat if the flour made therefrom is exported.

One of three committee amendments acted on during the day was adopted. It would bar convict-mined goods as well as convict-manufactured articles from entry into this country.

BISHOPS WILL TALK AT COMING SERVICES

To Leading Prelates to Be Heard Tomorrow at Cathedral.

BOTH ATTENDING PARLEY

Two leading bishops of the Episcopal Church in this country will be the preachers tomorrow at Washington Cathedral.

These prelates are the Right Rev. Irving P. Johnson, Bishop of Colorado, who will preach at the people's open air evensong at the foot of the Peace Cross at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and the Right Rev. James Wise, Bishop of Kansas, who will preach the sermon at the 11 o'clock celebration of the Holy Communion in Bethlehem Chapel.

Both bishops have been attending the conference of the seventy at the College of Preachers.

The special preacher at the church of the Epiphany tomorrow morning will be the Rev. Robert E. Browning, rector of the Church of the Ascension, Baltimore, Md. Dr. Browning was for several years associate minister at Epiphany, serving both with the late Dr. Randolph H. McKim and his successor, the then Dr. James E. Freeman. He resigned from the Epiphany Church to accept the appointment in Baltimore. The pulpit at the evening service will be occupied by the Rev. Dr. Morris, acting rector of Epiphany.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. At 9:45 o'clock the summer session of the church school will be held, and at 6:15 o'clock the young people of the parish will gather for their weekly meeting.

The Rev. John J. Queally, rector of the Church of the Transfiguration, will officiate at all services tomorrow, including Holy Communion, at 7:30 o'clock; morning prayer and sermon, at 11 o'clock, and evening prayer at 8 o'clock.

Chest Head Urges Stories for Papers

Cup Will Be Awarded for Best Human-Interest Narratives.

Human interest stories rather than notes of meetings or statistics were stressed as desirable for newspapers by Elwood Street, director of the Community Chest, in a talk on "Effective Publicity For Social Agencies" at a meeting of the publicity committee of the chest yesterday.

"The newspaper is probably the greatest aid to social work that exists today," Street said. Through its columns, it can, by placing the results of your work before the entire city, bring that work to the attention of people who otherwise would never hear of it."

Following Street's talk, it was announced that a silver cup would be awarded to the organization connected with the chest which turns in the best news story to any paper during the course of the month.

Universalists Complete Plans for Convention

Plans are being completed for the Universalist general convention at the Mayflower Hotel during the week of October 20 to 27. The plans are being made by the Universalist National Memorial Church of which the Rev. Frederic W. Perkins is pastor.

More than 100 delegates are expected to attend the convention, which will be held at the Mayflower because of the incomplete condition of the new Universalist National Memorial Church. The Rev. Frank D. Adams, of Detroit, president of the general convention, will preside at the main sessions.

B.Y.P.U. at Hyattsville Will Install Officers

Installation services for the new officers of the Baptist Young Peoples Union of the First Baptist Church of Hyattsville will be held at 7 o'clock tomorrow evening.

A list of the officers who will be installed follows: Alton Oberholzer, president; Mrs. S. W. Crosthwait, vice president; Jack Harington, recording secretary; Marion Crawford, corresponding secretary; Wilfred Eaton, athletic director; Miss Elizabeth Norton, pianist; Lloyd Proctor, chorister; Miss Harriett Sowers and Mrs. P. H. Spencer, group captains.

Theosophists to Open Eighth Capital Session

The United Lodge of Theosophists will open its eighth session in Washington in the Hill Building tomorrow night. A lecture will be given on "What Are Theosophists?"

The lodge program for the coming season will consist of a lecture, followed by questions and answers, every Sunday evening at 8:15 o'clock, and class every Thursday at the same time, when the philosophical and ethical principles of theosophy will be studied.

Hotel Men Convene Here.

Henry M. Scharf, manager of the Hotel Gettysburg at Gettysburg, Pa., presided at the opening session of the annual Middle-Atlantic Association of Greeters Charters meeting here yesterday at the Willard Hotel. Registrations were made during the morning and a luncheon was held at the Mayflower at noon.

Talks on Roosevelt's Life Planned by Rev. Dr. Pierce

Motion Pictures Will Illustrate Study to Be Given Tomorrow; Other Protestant Ministers Announce Topics and Times of Sermons.

The first of three studies of the life and achievents of Theodore Roosevelt, including moving picture illustrations of the former President, will be given tomorrow night by the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, minister of the First Congregational Church.

The subject of the first study is "Account for Roosevelt." The motion picture will show Roosevelt as a Rough Rider, as President, in Africa, South America, in Europe and at his home in Oyster Bay. Pictures to accompany the forthcoming talks will give views of historical, international and scientific phases in the life of Roosevelt.

At the morning service, Dr. Pierce will preach on "Truths We Believe." The vested chorus choir, under the direction of Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl, will sing. On Thursday night at 8 o'clock, Dr. Pierce will talk on "Personal Influence." His talk will be illustrated by the motion picture, "The River Pirate."

At the morning service of the Mount Vernon Place Church, the Rev. W. A. Lambeth will preach on "Spiritual Reinforcements Within." H. R. Deal, the junior preacher, will address the children on "Sincerity in Work." Mr. Deal will also preach at the evening service, taking as his subject, Doers of the Gospel."

In the absence of the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Souls Church, the Rev. William L. Sullivan will preach at the morning service, taking as his subject, "Transfiguring Life."

"At One With God" will be the subject of the Rev. Harold E. Beatty, pastor of the Georgetown Lutheran Church, at the morning service tomorrow. At the evening service, he will preach on "The Angel With the Sword."

The Rev. C. B. Austin, pastor of the West Washington Baptist Church, will preach at the morning service tomorrow on the subject of "Rediging the Wells." His topic at the evening service will be "The Church and Its Life in the World."

The Rev. Frederic W. Perkins, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church, will preach at the morning service on "A Holy Fear." The services are being held in the Ambassador Theater, pending completion of the new church.

"Why a Number of Christians in Washington Expect Jesus' Second Coming" will be the subject of the Rev. E. Hez Swem at the Centennial Baptist Church at the evening service tomorrow. At the morning service he will preach on "A Human May Become Our Other Heart."

The Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, who has resumed preaching at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church following his return from England, will preach at the morning service tomorrow on "Like Unto Children." Sunday evening services will be resumed on the first Sunday in October.

A sermon to youth will be preached by the Rev. John E. Briggs at the Fifth Baptist Church tomorrow morning. The topic is "Watch." Music will be furnished by the Washington Boys Independent Band.

The Rev. John D. Gregory, assistant minister of the Church of the Covenant, will preach at the morning service on "God Given Guidance." Special music will be rendered.

The Rev. N. P. Patterson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, will speak on "Union With Christ" at the old church on John Marshall place at the morning service tomorrow. No evening services are being held at the church until further notice.

The Rev. William E. La Rue, pastor of the Takoma Baptist Church, will preach at the morning service tomorrow on "Seeing the Unseen." He will also preach a sermonette to the children on the topic of "Why Go to School?"

Electa Chapter, No. 2, will have charge of the afternoon services at the Masonic and Eastern Star Home tomorrow. The Rev. T. S. Davis, of the Anacostia Methodist Episcopal Church, will officiate.

"The Chief Principle in a Great Life" and "The Print of the Nails" will be the morning and evening sermon subjects, respectively, of the Rev. Walter M. Michael at the Brightwood Park Methodist Episcopal Church tomorrow.

The Rev. E. L. Sharpe, of Williamsport, Pa., will occupy the pulpit at the H Street Christian Church at both morning and evening services tomorrow. His topic at the morning service will be "The Worst Disbelief," and at the evening service, "Christ on Trial."

"Facets of Faith" will be the subject of the sermon of the Rev. Edward O. Clark at the Chevy Chase Baptist Church at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow. He wil also preach a junior sermon to the children.

The Rev. Harry L. Collier, pastor of the Full Gospel Tabernacle, will officiate at three services tomorrow, following his return from a lengthy vacation trip. Celebrating home coming day of the church, one service will be held in the morning, one in the afternoon and one in the evening, marking the opening of the fall season.

The Rev. J. W. Thompson, of York, Pa., will occupy the pulpit of the Albright Memorial Evangelical Church at the morning service tomorrow. Holy Communion will be observed at this service. Evening services will be resumed tomorrow night, with the regular pastor, the Rev. George E. Schnabel, preaching.

The Rev. H. H. Harmon, of Indianapolis, Ind., director of the National City Christian Church Crusade, will speak tomorrow morning at the Vermont Avenue Christian Church on the subject of "The Church Girding Itself." Dr. Harmon will also speak at the evening service.

Sermons pertaining to home-coming day will be preached at the morning and evening services of the Ninth Street Christian Church by the Rev. B. H. Melton.

Talmud Synagogue Will Be Dedicated

Services Will Be Held Here Tomorrow; Parade Is Planned.

The Synagogue of the Congregation and Talmud Torah B'nai Israel, at Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest, will be dedicated with appropriate services at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The ceremonies will commence at 3 o'clock with an automobile parade from the old Georgia Avenue Synagogue to the new one. At the church ceremonies, Benjamin L. Tepper, local attorney, will act as master of ceremonies.

Rabbi Loeb, of the Fifth Street Synagogue, will deliver the invocation, and Rabbi Abram Simon, of the Eighth Street Temple, will deliver the benediction. Addreases will be made by Senator William H. King, of Utah; District Commissioner Sydney P. Taliaferro, and the Rev. Chesteen Smith, pastor of the Hamline Church.

Mrs. Bill Will Speak To Christian Scientists

Mrs. Annie C. Bill, founder and leader of the Christian Science Parent Church, will speak at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning at the regular service of the Parent Church in the assembly room of the Hotel Lafayette. Her subject will be "Periodic Unfoldment."

Mrs. Bill has just returned from Washington after six months in England, where she lectured and taught classes in Christian science.

Orders to Be Conferred on Students.

The Right Rev. John M. McNamara, vicar general of the Archdiocese of Baltimore, will confer minor orders upon a group of students for the priesthood at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the crypt of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University. The ordination will be continued at 6:45 o'clock Monday.

SPECIAL MISSION PASTORS ADJOURN

"The Seventy" Holds Its First Annual Conference in District.

HIGH OFFICIALS CONFER

The first annual conference of "The Seventy," special mission preachers of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which has been in session at the College of Preachers of Washington Cathedral since Tuesday, concluded yesterday with a summary of conference results by the Right Rev. Hugh L. Burleson, Bishop of South Dakota, and the Very Rev. G. L. Richardson, of Albany, N. Y.

The Right Rev. Thomas C. Darst, Bishop of East Carolina and chairman of the national commission on evangelism, and the Right Rev. Irving Peake Johnson, Bishop of Colorado and chairman of the committee on schools of the prophets, expressed the opinion that the conference marked a significant step in the development of the widespead evangelistic program advocated by the general convention of the Episcopal Church in Washington last October.

Members of "The Seventy" are each expected to devote at least two weeks to preaching and teaching missions outside their own dioceses during the year. An unique development of the conference was the writing of a prayer which is to be offered by all the members of "The Seventy" whenever missions are being conducted.

The Right Rev. Philip M. Rhinelander, former Bishop of Pennsylvania and warden of the College of Preachers, who with the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, served as hosts to the conference, expressed pleasure that the College of Preachers had been able to offer its hospitality to the members of "The Seventy."

Central Union Mission Sunday Plans Are Made

Extensive plans already have been launched for city-wide observation of Central Union Mission Sunday, which this year falls on October 27, the forty-fifth anniversary of the mission's founding. John S. Bennett, superintendent of the Central Union Mission, declares that practically every church in Washington will observe the day this year.

On the morning of October 27, outstanding rescue mission superintendents from many cities will occupy the pulpits of different churches to which the mission belongs, Bennett said. In the afternoon a mass meeting will be held, while the annual meeting of all the church representatives who choose the mission ministerial council of 27 pastors, will be held the preceding evening, October 26.

FAILURE OF SCHOOL CADET CORPS LOOMS

Principal of Alexandria High Says Roster Is Far From Full.

21 RECRUITS ARE NEEDED

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 562.

Organization of a cadet corps for the Alexandria High School this year is threatened with failure and unless an additional 21 students register for the military training by October 1 it will have to be abandoned, according to Henry T. Moncure, principal of the school. The work of shrolling members of the cadet corps was started shortly after school opened on September 5, and so far there have been 79 to respond. It was explained by Principal Moncure yesterday that the War Department furnishes rifles, ammunition, targets and other necessary military equipment free of charge, and members of the corps are enabled to secure uniforms at a nominal cost, but the minimum strength of the corps required by the Government is 100.

It is the opinion of the principal that the parents of some of the students fear that membership in the cadet corps renders the boys liable for military service in the event of war. This, however, according to the principal, is a mistaken idea, and the main purpose of military training is simply to give the boys an insight into military work and to provide beneficial exercise.

Col. Clarence Deems, jr., U. S. A., retired, has been assigned by the War Department to the high school as professor of military science and tactics. He is a veteran of the Philippine insurrection, and served with distinction during the World War.

The corps has already been organized and the following appointments have been announced by Col. Deems, with the approval of Principal Moncure: Sidney Hancock, cadet captain; Gorman Ridgely, cadet first lieutenant and adjutant; Charles Nicholson, cadet sergeant major; Clake Parker, cadet first lieutenant, assigned to the first platoon; Raymond Wells, cadet second lieutenant, assigned to the second platoon; Martin Violette, cadet second lieutenant, third platoon, and Keary Hill, cadet second lieutenant and supply officer.

Students' night was observed last night at the American Legion trade exhibit and style show at the armory and there was a large attendance of students from various schools of the city.

One of the features of last night's entertainment program was an exhibition of moving pictures "shots" by John S. Arnold, official photographer for the display. Views shown included those of the 101 Ranch circus, pupils and faculty of the law school and various other persons and scenes taken in the city.

Plume Stamps, colored, and Thomas Cook, colored, both of Philadelphia, and both Pullman employes, were each fined $50 and $20 costs in police court yesterday for illegal possession of liquor, charges of disorderly conduct preferred against the men being dropped.

The men were arrested by Sergt. Sims and Patrolmen Smoots and Quetermeuse at Union Station Sunday morning and charged with creating a disturbance after getting off an excursion train. When they were searched by the police, Stamps was found to have 1 quart and ten half pints of whisky, while Cook had four half pints.

Doran O'Hara, who claims to be from Jacksonville, Fla., was fined $5 and $9 costs in police court yesterday for being drunk. Policeman George Welker, answering a complaint Thursday night that a man was tampering with automobiles in front of the George Mason Hotel, arrested O'Hara in a car with two cans of "canned heat" and two limes in his pocket.

Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Barnes, of Denver, Colo., parents of Mrs. Louise Johnson, who is in the Alexandria Hospital unconscious as the result of an automobile accident near Fairfax Tuesday night, arrived at the bedside of their daughter yesterday. The condition of Mrs. Johnson continues critical, and physicians hold out little hope for her recovery. Her husband, Homer L. Johnson, was killed in the accident, but her 5-year-old son, Homer, jr., was unhurt.

Paul R. Miller, of Washington, student aviator whose plane plunged into the Potomac River off the shipyard Wednesday evening, left the Alexandria Hospital yesterday entirely recovered from his experience. Miller, when taken to the hospital, was suffering from shock and minor cuts and bruises. The plane fell from a low altitude and was not badly damaged.

Mrs. Ann A. Pierce, 84, Dead Near Hamilton

Special to The Washington Post.

Hamilton, Va., Sept. 20.—Mrs. Ann A. Pierce, widow of Z. T. Pierce, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Russell Gregg, near here, yesterday, following a two-week illness. She was 84 years of age and had been in failing health for some time. Before her marriage she was a Miss Dowdell, and for some time made her home in Fauquier County.

She is survived by four daughters—Mrs. Russell Gregg, of Hamilton; Mrs. R. L. Ross, of Alexandria; Mrs. L. G. Grasty, of Orange, and Miss Mary D. Pierce, of Farmville, and by one son, Carroll Pierce, of Alexandria. She also is survived by nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Funeral services will be held from the Gregg home at 2 o'clock tomorrow, with interment at Lakeview Cemetery.

PANIC IN CABARET FIRE IS FATAL TO 18

flimsy decorations that covered the walls. As the flames shot around the room there was a wild rush for the dance floor in the center and then for the two small rooms. The small dressing room had no exit and 30 men and women piled up there, unconscious from smoke or fright. In the women's rest room many more crowded in panic. A window, one of two on the second floor that could be opened, was the way through which more than a score slid to safety before a fire hose, used as a rope, broke and tossed one girl into an alley. After that many others were dropped out by Al Handler, leader of the cabaret orchestra. Then he, too, was pushed through the window by the frenzied crowd.

At the various hospitals it was said many of the injured were in such condition their recovery was uncertain. Coroner Albert French announced an inquest will be held later.

John M. Bischoff, commissioner of the department of buildings and safety engineering, said that an exit that every one overlooked, or that no one knew about, was available for escape from the flaming dining room. It was through the kitchen, with double doors leading to a stairway not touched by the flames. Bischoff said the building complied with the fire laws here.

Damage Is Slight.

Except for the overturning of furniture, the burning of decorations and the tons of water poured into the place, relatively little damage was done to the interior of the cabaret. There were no fallen walls and no collapsed ceiling. On the side walls, however, was the evidence of a sheet of flame that swept with lightning-like speed through the highly inflammable material that gave the place a gay appearance.

Nearly 200 persons, guests and employes, were in the place when the cry of "fire!" came. Many were found unconscious when rescuers—police, firemen, taxi drivers and passersby—got through the wall of flame that blocked the stairway and into the dining room.

The stories of those of the survivors able to describe their experiences were to the same general effect—the flames burst in upon the diners almost without warning, and almost instantly the nearly 200 men and women in the dining room became a fighting, struggling mass seeking egress through the two windows that alone opened to the outside. Fear swept everything before it. Tables and chairs were overturned and men and women alike were trampled under foot as the mad rush began.

Most of the injured were Detroiters, but there were a few out-of-town visitors. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Snyder, of Montreal, both of whom are in a hospital suffering from burns and smoke inhalation. S. H. Hearne, of Houston, Tex., suffered body burns, and Lawrence Armstrong, of Flint, Mich., received injuries to his head, a fractured leg and hand. Harriett Cummings, of Flint, also is in a hospital. She was unconscious when taken from the cabaret.

Investigations Started.

Investigations under way today include those of the recreation department, the police, the department of buildings and safety engineering and the fire marshal of Detroit, and by the State fire marshal and the coroner's office.

The Study Club had been in operation about a year. Cohn, the proprietor, said he had put about $32,000 into equipment in the club and that very little of it was covered by insurance. Saying that he was not concerned about the insurance or the financial loss, Cohn reiterated his statement, 'If there only had been one man in the place who could have kept his head."

BOY SAYS KIDNAPERS FLED WITH $512,000

til an hour after Milton had been found. Then, "all in a puzzle," he had left his little flat at 246 Rivington street, where he and Milton and his two motherless daughters had lived for years, and had gone down among his pushcart merchant friends to debate what could have happened and what might come of it.

"I don't know what to tell you I think," he declaimed excitedly when a reporter found him. "Milton is always a good boy. He helps me fine with the girls. He is good around the house and smart in school. I want him to go to college. But how? I am just a tailor and, right now, I ain't got a job, anyway.

"So when he finds he ain't going to college, he quit high school and gets a job."

The elder Alter, a futilely worried little man, waited at the station house long after Inspector Mulrooney announced that the questioning would not be concluded tonight.

He would not say whether this information fitted in with Tyrell's theory—elucidated before Milton's reappearance—that the robbery was the work of "an uptown bootleg bond gang," an organization which, he said, trains young men in thievery, installing them in runners' jobs in the financial district, and taking the major share of the profits.

They questioned him for five hours. Then they arrested him, charged him with grand larceny and locked him up for the night. His story, they explained briefly, had seemed to them from the beginning to have certain discrepancies, but when Commissioner Grover Whalen and Chief Inspector Mulrooney also thought there were discrepancies, they decided to go ahead and make the arrest.

Stuart Edwards, a member of Hiscoe & Co., shrugged when the decision was told him. He still believed the boy's story, he said.

CROWD TO PROTEST SLAYING OF WOMAN

Labor Defense "Locals" Plan Meetings Against Killing of Mrs. Wiggins.

RIOT TRIAL COLLAPSES

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 20 (A.).—"Mass protest" meetings by members of the International Labor Defense "locals" throughout the country are planned by that organization and affiliated bodies for tomorrow and Sunday in memory of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, National Textile Workers Union member, who was slain by a mob near Gastonia a week ago.

Just what form the meetings would take was not disclosed in announcements by local headquarters. It was, however, that the "protest" was expected to be Nationwide.

Meanwhile the case at Marion, N. C., where Alfred Hoffman, United Textile Workers of America organizer, and five other men were on trial charged with rioting and inciting to rebellion, collapsed almost as sensationally as did that against the 16 National Textile workers and leaders charged with murder of Chief of Police O. F. Aderholt, of Gastonia, at Charlotte ten days ago.

This time instead of a juror becoming insane, J. Hugh Hall, one of the defendants, who had not been freed on bail, sawed his way out of the McDowell County Jail. Due to the fact that the indictment against the six was a joint one, the case was declared a mistrial and went over six weeks. There is no connection between the National Textile Workers Union and the United Textile Workers of America.

Delegates Are Chosen For U. D. C. Convention

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 20.—Mrs. W. D. Campbell, Mrs. D. C. Smith, Miss Imogen Watts, Mrs. J. E. Taylor, Mrs. T. J. Powell, Mrs. J. A. Reese, Mrs. N. D. Eller and Mrs. Malcolm Peak have been elected delegates from Kirkwood Otey Chapter, U. D. C., to the State convention to be held at Wytheville October 1 to 5.

Kirkwood Otey and Old Dominion Chapters, U. D. C., here, have indorsed Mrs. Charles E. Bolling, of Richmond, for presidency of the State division. The local delegates will support Mrs. Bolling's candidacy at the Wytheville convention next month.

JUDGE DISCHARGES GIRL ROBBER JURY

clared, was the State's. District Attorney Blundell's statement of this morning that if a hung jury resulted Rebecca should be confined in an institution for treatment "in justice to her and to the public" drew from the young lawyer husband this indignant reply:

"If she was declared insane, her friends over the State—and they are legion—would never permit her to be sent to an asylum. They would post a bond in two minutes of any amount and she would remain in my care, as it is my wish that she do. We will go back to our little home in Fort Worth where her treatment under Dr. Wilmer Allison will continue. It will be the State's next move, not ours."

Mrs. Rogers was a stenographer in the offices of Attorney General Dan Moody, now governor, when she robbed the bank. Shortly after her arrest, she was brought into the District Court at Georgetown, Tex., for trial on an arson charge, lodged in the State's claim that she fired a vacant residence house in Round Rock, just prior to the Buda robbery, hoping that an adjacent bank would be deserted and that she might slip in and rob it. The jury disagreed.

Then, she went on trial at Lagrange for the Buda "job." A 14-year penalty was assessed but later was reversed. The case went back to Lagrange and this time a jury could not be obtained. The transfer to New Braunfels followed.

Lockhart, Tex., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Having learned of the jury's failure to agree in the Rebecca Bradley Rogers bank robbery trial at New Braunfels, District Attorney Fred Blundell tonight said he did "not know" what action next would be taken in her case.

He reiterated the assertion that if Otis Rogers and his backers are "sincere" in claiming she is insane they "should have her placed under treatment."

"I, myself," he added, "believe she is sane."

Blundell came here before the jury at New Braunfels was discharged to be with his wife, who is seriously ill.

Fire Destroys Horses And Mules in Big Barn

Frederick, Md., Sept. 20.—A large barn on the farm of William J. Haines, near Union Bridge, tenanted by John E. Buffington, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin early this morning.

Two horses and four mules perished in the flames. About 150 bushels of wheat and a quantity of farming implements and harness were destroyed. Firemen from Union Bridge arrived in time to save adjoining buildings. The loss is estimated at $7,000.

PEACOX THREATENED WIFE, GIRL INSISTS

remember now that on that same visit he did tell me about her leaving after he slapped her face and said he would get her some time. I wasn't sure what he meant. I thought perhaps a beating."

Mrs. Alphonse Heinzelman, mother of the dead girl, testified that after one separation of Peacox and her daughter the defendant had threatened to "shoot up the place" unless he was informed where his wife had gone.

Trial Is Adjourned.

When it became apparent that the cross-examination of Mrs. Heinzelman would continue for considerable time Justice Tompkins announced adjournment of the trial until Monday morning.

Miss Newman in her testimony told of a visit to the Peacox apartment a few days after the killing. At that time she said Peacox told her of having had a "little trouble."

"He said he'd had a bum in the place the past Sunday," she related (this was the day Mrs. Peacox was killed) "and she'd got drunk and screamed and he'd had to carry her out. He asked me if anybody inquired about it to say it was me and I agreed."

Screams Were Heard.

Another woman witness was Mrs. Muriel Clarke, who lived below Peacox and who told of hearing screams and thumps the night of the killing She looked out her window and saw Peacox stuffing a bulky bundle in his car.

The first witness of the day was Capt. Michael Silverstein, of the Mt. Vernon police. He told of Peacox's confession, of which no stenographic report was taken. Cross-questioning brought out that he had "forgotten" to tell that Peacox had told him the killing "was all an accident."

"You made a written report of the confession later, didn't you?" he was asked.

"I don't know," he replied.

mediate publicly declared conclusion of the British that the purpose of such a tonnage of underwater craft was commerce destroying and that Great Britain must reserve the right to be unlimited in the construction of antisubmarine weapons.

Although Secretary Stimson, at the request of President Hoover, stated that the Chief Executive had not given even the slightest thought to the composition of the American delegation to the proposed conference, discussion of possible selections continued in unofficial circles.

At the Capitol the opinion was advanced in some senatorial circles that Hoover might decide finally on Secretary Stimson as chairman of the delegation, with Charles Evans Hughes, Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican floor leader, and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic floor leader, as the other three members.

Girl Held in Death Visited by Mother

Eula Robertson, 16, Accused of Killing Her Rejected Suitor, 45.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 20.—Released from the Bedford County Jail, Bedford, Pa., in bond of the sum of $500 late yesterday, Mrs. Jasper Miller, mother of Miss Eula Robertson, 16, spent the morning in the county jail here visiting her daughter, held for the action of the grand jury on a charge of shooting and killing Thomas Sullivan, 45, rejected admirer.

Sullivan, the former convict admirer, whom Miss Robertson says she shot in self defense, was buried in the county cemetery this afternoon, no one having claimed the body. Both State's Attorney William A. Huster and Estel C. Kelly, of the defense counsel, had little to say this morning. Maj. Huster said that no action would be forthcoming from his office until October 7, when the girl will be presented to the grand jury. Kelly said that the defense counsel contemplated no action seeking the young woman's release.

Guy O'Neil, owner of the fatal .32 caliber pistol, remains in the county jail in Bedford, Pa., held on the same charge that detained Mrs. Miller, removal of an organ from a Reformed church at Chanceyville, Pa.

ERLEBACHER F ST.

"Be Sure to Read The POST Sunday"

"The Capital's Greatest NEWSpaper" will bring to you the complete and accurate report of every significant happening throughout the world and more worth while news of local affairs than will be found in any other newspaper. The services of the Associated Press and other great news gathering agencies are supplemented by special correspondents in every news center and resident reporters cover the news from nearby points in Maryland and Virginia. Every item must adhere to the rigid Post standards of accuracy, completeness and timeliness and must uphold The Post reputation for well written articles. In addition to comprehensive coverage of news events The Post also offers an unusually large volume of entertaining informative features, including

8 Pages of COLORED COMICS

Featured by nationally famous comic characters—Andy Gump, the Captain and the Kids, Joe Jinks, Winnie Winkle, The Man in the Brown Derby, Ella Cinders, The Bungle Family and the inhabitants of "Gasoline Alley." All in brilliant combinations of color that lend life and realism to side-splitting adventures.

"The Pink" Sporting Section

The favored sporting section of Washington fans because of its interesting eyewitness accounts of events in every field of sport and because it includes within its scope not only affairs of national interest, but local contests between schoolboy or industrial teams as well. Other popular features of this section are "From Tee to Green" and other authoritative comment by experts in various sporting divisions.

Attractions in the Amusement World

The Washington Post amusement pages are recognized as a reliable guide to what is best in the motion picture or theatrical world. Unbiased criticisms prove of great value to those who have but limited time for entertainment and must choose with care to make that time most enjoyable. Under the same heading may be included Radio News with the programs of principal stations and information of interest to every radio enthusiast.

Society Section

The popularity of The Post among those socially prominent has often led to the remark that "a couple of the 'smart set' hardly consider that they are married until an account of the event has appeared in the Society Section of The Washington Post." This section also contains much other material of feminine interest—Fashion articles, Dare's weekly fashion letter and news of women's clubs.

Real Estate Section

Consistent reading of these pages will keep any one in touch with local trends in real estate in regard to locations, design, approved features and values. Undoubtedly the great volume of advertising in this section represents the cream of real estate offerings in Washington and neighboring Maryland and Virginia and is as interesting to prospective purchasers of real estate as anything in the news columns. The classified advertising pages tomorrow will present a directory of available apartments that will be of utmost value to every home seeker.

THE CUBAN SITUATION.

The Senate committee on foreign relations seems to be impressed by numerous complaints against the state of affairs in Cuba. Secretary Stimson is to appear before the committee soon, to give such information as he may possess. Highly sensational charges have been made that Cuba is misgoverned, that Americans and other foreigners are mistreated, that the people have been intimidated by a "reign of terror," and that the Machado administration has perpetuated itself in violation of the constitution and the laws. On the strength of these charges a demand is made that the Senate shall "investigate Cuba."

Notwithstanding the disposition of the Senate to take over the functions of other branches of the Government, it does seem that it should investigate its own powers and make sure of itself before assuming the right to conduct the Government's foreign relations. If the treaties and the laws are not faithfully executed it is up to the House to act first, rather than the Senate.

A Senate investigation of Cuba would doubtless disclose many faults on the part of the Machado government. A Cuban investigation of the United States would probably uncover just as many faults. A Cuban senatorial committee investigating the United States Senate would discover that a State had been denied two senators, in violation of the Constitution. But what of it? The intrusion of a foreign smelling committee would be resented, and its findings would have no effect in mending the wicked ways of the Senate.

If there has been a breakdown of government in Cuba, so that the people and foreigners are deprived of their rights, the President of the United States is in a position to know it, and it is his duty to take cognizance of it. He can gather accurate information much more expeditiously than a Senate committee can gather it, and he has the advantage of possessing authority to act, which the committee and the Senate would not have.

No doubt, if a condition should develop which, in the opinion of the President, required the United States to intervene in Cuba, he would advise Congress of the situation. In any less serious emergency he has the power to investigate and act. He has not asked for the assistance of the Senate committee on foreign affairs in discharging his duties.

When it was proposed that the Senate should assist President Coolidge in Nicaraguan affairs by sending a smelling committee to that country better counsels prevailed, and the executive department managed to discharge its functions. Possibly Mr. Hoover can be intrusted by the Senate to take note of any Cuban situation that requires attention. Certainly there is no uprising by the American people demanding that the Senate shall take over the President's duties.

UNITED, JUST THE SAME.

If a proposal to unite the veterans of the Union and Confederate armies in a "grand review" had been made and turned down in an annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic 35 years ago a "rebel yell" might have arisen in the South which would have reechoed throughout the Northern States. But the disapproval of that suggestion at the encampment held in Maine this year has caused more in the way of protest from the North than from any other section. New England newspapers are disposed to criticize rather sharply the exhibition of peevishness displayed by the "boys who wore the blue."

The Richmond Times-Dispatch, on the other hand, says that "while it is a little disquieting" to find that some of the old boys of the Northern army are still averse to fraternizing with their opponents of 60 years ago, "we shall not be out of patience with these Union veterans. They are just a little old and peevish. If they wish still to harbor ugly memories of what happened in their boyhood, let them have their way about it. Their peculiar whims count as nothing in the life of the people of the United States, North and South, going forward to a common destiny."

The sons of the veterans of the South and the North were comrades in arms in Cuba in 1898. Later, in the Philippines and in the World War they served side by side in trenches and "over the top." The Marines who aided in the suppression of the Boxer outbreak in China, the boys of the National Guard who patrolled the Mexican border under Pershing in 1916, and others who brought order out of the revolution in Nicaragua last year were from every State of the Union, and no one showed the slightest disposition to criticize Jack because his father followed Grant, or Tom for the reason that his dad was a color bearer in Lee's army. The past is dead. The people of the Union are one people, who can afford to look with tolerance upon the last feeble flickerings of passions on either side of the Mason and Dixon line.

NO MORE CENTRALIZATION.

Possibly the people of Kentucky who sent John Marshall Robsion to Congress nine years ago, and who have returned him four times since, may be a unit in support of Mr. Robsion's proposal to create a new executive department to direct the education of the people of the United States. It is even possible that many rural communities that are in the greatest need of education may likewise indorse his proposal. But the country generally has evinced no all-pervading desire to add another portfolio to the Cabinet or to further centralize all government in Washington.

Mr. Robsion has advanced no new idea in his bill to erect into a "department" the present Bureau of Education. A great deal of propaganda has been spread in behalf of that project, but it has not met with anything like a wave of approval either from the public or from members of the administration. On the contrary, it is very generally understood that the present Secretary of the Interior is no more favorable to the proposal of the Kentucky statesman than was his predecessor, who emphatically opposed the elevation of the bureau into a department.

The people seem to be practically a unit in opposing a plan for Federal interference with education. The States are apparently perfectly willing to carry on the burden of the schools without the aid of an authority centralized and "standardized" in Washington.

The Bureau of Education as now functioning renders valuable service in the collection and distribution of information and statistics, which are at the disposal of the educational authorities of all the States, "just for the asking." It is difficult to understand why a change in the functions of that bureau should be deemed advantageous, except by communities that would like to saddle upon the Government the cost of maintaining schools.

REGULATION OF BUSES.

The fact that three bus accidents have occurred recently on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, makes it appear as though something were radically wrong in the operation or regulation of these carriers. It is highly important that the situation be examined. The bus is becoming a highway factor to be reckoned with in increasing numbers. The safety of the thousands who ride in buses, as well as the safety of those who use their own motor cars demands that buses be operated with care and that their operation be rigidly regulated by the authorities. Are buses out of Washington being operated properly? Does the code of the Maryland Public Service Commission adequately guard public safety? Is the code being stringently enforced?

The Maryland commission recently completed a survey of the equipment of nine bus lines operating in the State. Of the three lines involved in the recent accidents, the commission's inspectors found that practically every bus examined had one or more defects, and not one of the nine lines was given a clean bill of health in respect to every piece of equipment. It is true that most of the defects were of a minor nature, involving speedometers, stop lights and the like. Nevertheless, the investigation proves the fact that there is a tendency to ignore the operating code, and suggests the need of more rigid enforcement. This has been promised by the commission.

Until the speed of buses is restricted there will be accidents. These huge vehicles running out of Washington are now scheduled to make faster time than private vehicles can lawfully travel despite the fact that a bus can not be handled or maneuvered as easily as a private automobile. Such speed can be made only at the expense of the safety and road rights of other drivers, and at the risk of further accidents.

COST OF AIR MAIL.

The growing popularity of the air mail service, and the like increase in the use of air express, leads to the belief that the air mail contractors may be willing to submit to a decided reduction in the amount of compensation paid them under their contracts. Railroads and air corporations have made rapid strides toward building up a passenger business by combined rail and airplane service, and according to reports from some centers of aeronautic industry dirigibles may soon be as thick in the air as are buses on the highways. The postage on letters carried by plane has been reduced 50 per cent from the fee originally exacted, but the increase in receipts from this source has not kept up with the increased cost of the service. The air mail contracts, as they stand at present, add some $3,000,000 annually to the postal deficit.

Postmaster General Brown is determined to cut this deficit and to make the air service as nearly self-supporting as possible. With this end in view, as well as with a view to the extension of the service, he has called the contractors to meet him in conference on September 30, "when they will commence negotiations looking to the extension of their contracts for a period of ten years from the date they began to operate."

This conference will be under authority granted the Postmaster General in the act of May 17, 1928. It is noted in this connection that the cost per pound for the transportation of mails through the air has grown less with each new contract, and it stands to reason that the companies and individuals now holding these contracts will be willing to meet the proposal of the department for the reduction of their compensation if they can thereby be assured of the extension of those contracts over a period of ten years instead of facing the necessity for entering into competition with other would-be carriers every twelve months.

It is expected that the outcome of the conference will be a material reduction in the cost of the air mail service to the public.

IN CIVILIZED NEW YORK.

Can it be that the people of Spanish America are more honest than the "gringoes" who inhabit this republic? Or is it that the tribe of racketeers has not yet invaded the West Coast of the Southern Hemisphere? It must be one of the two hypotheses that accounts for the fact that gold coin to the amount of $3,570,000 could be shipped in an ordinary freight car from La Paz to Arica without the protection of an armed guard. That is how the coin was brought to the side of the Santa Maria of the Grace Line, as she lay at the dock in Arica to take the treasure on board for New York.

Telling of the shipment, Capt. Parker, of the Santa Maria, said when he docked his vessel in New York that the agent of the line had casually mentioned that he had a shipment of gold ready, and Capt. Parker, upon asking where the guards were, was told: "We don't need any guards here. The shipment came to us in a freight car with only one guard, all the way from La Paz."

A heavy guard was deemed necessary to transfer the shipment of $20 gold pieces from the pier in New York to the consignee in that city. "The shipment," says a press report, "was greeted by one fleet of armored trucks and a smaller-sized army of armed guards."

Arica is a turbulent port. Chile and Peru have been squabbling over it for half a century, but it seems that gold is safer from thieves and bandits in that region than in the civilized city of New York.

REFORMS IN TURKEY.

By HALIDE EDIB,
In the Yale Review.

"The 'great' man," says Dean Inge, "is generally carried along by some big wave, whether of action or thought. His own idiosyncrasies fit the circumstances in which he is placed; 30 years before or after he would probably not have done much." These words fit the Turkish situation and that of Mustafa Kemal Pasha. Before the Smyrna triumph, or even up to 1925, in spite of his great prestige, Mustafa Kemal Pasha could not have led his party into such a powerful and absolute regime, but he possessed the lightning power of seizing favorable circumstances at the right moment. After all, the Turkish dictatorship was not and is not unique in the world. The postwar world favors dictatorship. Bitterly disillusioned about the old institutions which were not sufficient to stop the great catastrophe of 1914 it seeks something new. The old broke down, crushing what was good as well as what was rotten. The new generation is morbidly impatient to see a new world rise overnight. Hence such words as "liberalism" and "freedom of thought," which leads to a slow growth, are now out of favor in politics. The mob cry of the world is for "spontaneous generation," a sudden, artificial, spontaneous human generation—a process that will turn men into the desired shape with the desired behavior and thought. Hence there has never been so much emphasis on "doing" instead of "thinking", as there is today. Dictatorships have the appearance of "doing" all the time, whether they accomplish lasting changes and effect internal reconstruction or not. Accordingly, they are the latest fashion in politics.

There is no other country which stands in need of "doing" more than Turkey. In such a country a strong, centralized government, if not a dictatorship, with stabilized forces backing it, is inevitable and perhaps necessary. This fundamental psychology of the present world, including Turkey, will tend to create and to maintain strong, centralized governments in Turkey, although the dictatorial form is a passing phase.

But the continuation under the dictatorial regime of 1925 to 1929 in Turkey of reforms—some of them begun long ago—and especially the nature of these reforms, are more interesting and profitable to consider than the terrorist methods by which they are supposed to have been made possible.

This process of reform has been going on for nearly a century, but within the last twenty years it has moved with tremendous rapidity. The story in the Western press, usually the outcome of the most superficial and hurried observation after a pleasant Mediterranean trip, is that Turkey was changed overnight from an Eastern into a Western country. This view is more than superficial; it is false. Whether the recent reforms could have been carried out by other than terrorist methods is a question to be seriously discussed. And there is no doubt that in time they were bound to be carried out—but whether in 3 years or in 13 or 30 years, no one can tell. Naturally, one includes among those which were sure to come only the fundamental reforms that will last. The nature of the leading reforms effected by the dictatorial regime in Turkey confirms, as will be shown, the assumption that they are the continuation of westward movements long under way and are not any sudden departure from the main line of progress which the Turks have taken.

In form Turkey is bound to stay a republic. The traditional forces are so much destroyed and discredited that the revival of the sultanate is an impossibility. Whether the military figures, with a party behind them, can assume a dictatorial power for very much longer will depend on what is going on in the world in general and in Europe in particular. Will there be a future united, though not uniform, Europe? If one could solve the sorry riddle of European destiny one could clearly answer the question, Whither Turkey?

A Thankless Task.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

TWO LIVES.

One thought that life should happy be,
And sought to dodge its care;
Another down the years could see
The sorrows waiting there.

The light of heart went dancing on,
And gave no thought of pain,
Since her the bright sun shined upon,
Why should she think of rain?

One built a stronghold for her grief,
A shelter for her tears,
And found a refuge in belief
From all her doubts and fears.

Both suffered anguish and despair,
For both was life the same.
But she who had not planned for care
Was helpless when it came.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to a Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY dear Louise:

You will be ready for college next year and I have been making a few inquiries in the hope of finding a school that will do you more good than harm.

So far I haven't succeeded.

All of the schools for young women in this section of the country are equipped to teach you as much as you need to know, but not one of them seems to know the value of liberty.

All of them seem rather proud of their "restrictions." A freshman isn't permitted to walk down town by herself; she may go shopping but once a week and then must be chaperoned; she isn't permitted to use a telephone while down town; she may have a "date" only once each week and then she must sit in a room with other girls who have callers; she may not talk to a boy while she is on the street.

These are samples. Different schools have different rules, some are reasonable and some foolish, and all of them relax discipline after the first term.

I don't mean to imply that rules like these would harm you—if you obeyed them. But foolish rules aren't obeyed and that makes them bad medicine for growing girls.

The female of the species loves liberty no less than the male, and when girls are enslaved by petty rules they become sneaks. They become expert in the art of hoodwinking authority, and they develop the belief that sin consists in being caught.

What is more, and worse, when they are punished for doing some harmless thing that is "wrong" only because a college rule forbids it they develop an inevitable contempt for rule makers and learn to hate authority.

I think it a bad scheme and I don't want you mixed up in it.

If I couldn't trust you out of my sight without a chaperone I wouldn't waste the money to educate you.

Some restrictions are necessary, for girls of your age aren't overburdened with good judgment and might run wild if turned loose without a hobble.

But I won't send you to a college whose foolish rules develop sneaks, and if I can't find one with more liberal ideas than a reform school I'll keep you at home and send you up each morning on the bus.

I'd like to give you a taste of "college life," but I have taught you to love liberty and be worthy of it and I won't have my work spoiled by well-meaning people who think character is developed by means of chains. Love,

DAD.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

BIGGER AND BETTER MERGERS.

Everybody's merging. It's the country's leading sport this season. Banks are merging, circuses are merging, oil companies are merging, food companies are merging and all over upland and lowland great industrial combinations are being proposed, which would make Theodore Roosevelt turn over in his mausoleum.

• • • •

The latest proposition, from President Loree, of the Delaware & Hudson is for merging his line with sixteen other Eastern railroads, bringing practically all the Eastern lines under one tent and making it possible for a passenger to fall from an upper berth anywhere on the Eastern seaboard under one mismanagement.

• • • •

The idea is all right as far as it goes but it doesn't go far enough. Before the railroads of America can give perfect service with minimum trouble and expense they must merge with the big corporations handling commodities required for good railroad service. Elmer Twitchell has some great ideas along this line.

• • • •

"I am for merging all the railroads," says Mr. Twitchell, "and then merging with the biggest mattress, chain store, food and pajama companies. This will mean more comfortable berths at lower prices, cheaper Pullman dinners and pajamas supplied by the road without extra charge.

• • • •

"I would take in the big mail-order houses so passengers can shop while on a long railroad journey; in fact I would put a chain-store car on every train for the convenience of the women passengers.

• • • •

"I would take in the big hotel chains and taxicab companies, too, so a railroad ticket would cover the entire cost of a trip away from home, including hotel, food and sight-seeing trips. I would make it possible for a couple going on a honeymoon to go to any ticket-office, state their needs and have the entire honeymoon trip arranged and a house rented and furnished for them upon their return.

• • • •

"If I had my way I would merge the railroads with the banks, utilities with oil companies, bringing them all into one cooperative system. Then a man could run into any bank for ten gallons of gas, a Pullman menu or a railroad journey, dash into any railroad station to deposit money and stop at any gasoline pumping station to reserve a parlor-car chair or a lower berth.

• • • •

"That," concluded Elmer, "would be service. On with the mergers, let the small competitors fall where they may!"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Correspondent Protests Against Prohibition of Night-time Parking of Automobiles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The District commissioners yesterday banned parking at any time on the south side of F street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. At the same time they approved certain other recommendations for restricted parking on Rhode Island avenue and other crowded thoroughfares. The necessity of such action can not be disputed. The time has arrived when Washington must restrict and ban parking in many thoroughfares in the interest of free traffic.

Once again, the restriction of night parking is being agitated. Certain Congressmen have taken the lead in the campaign and in view of the fact that a special Senate committee is at present examining into the local traffic situation there is a possibility that Congressional action may be invoked in connection with a general prohibition of all-night parking. Such prohibition, of course, is neither desirable or necessary. Night-time parking is the least objectionable of all.

There was a day when automobile ownership carried with it the necessity of providing storage space protected from the weather. Until as recently as several years ago, automobiles were so finished that they would deteriorate if left exposed to the elements. Radical improvement has been made in finishing materials and processes, however, until now it is no longer necessary that automobiles be kept covered lest they deteriorate. In the meantime, garage construction has not kept pace with automobile ownership. If an order were passed prohibiting all-night parking it could not be enforced because there is not sufficient garage space in the District to care for all the automobiles. Night-parking at present is entirely unobjectionable.

Takoma Park Needs Better Police Protection — Not Comic Opera Sheiks, But He-Men.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post has recorded the fact that there has been some housecleaning in the Takoma Park Police Department. That is the best piece of news that has come from the district for many months. The police department always has and always will be a joke until a bomb explodes and arouses the business men from their lethargy. The town has simply gone all fire department. The need of a well-organized form of police protection has really escaped the attention of the town entirely. Women have been attacked and many other crimes committed, yet nobody has been brought to justice—they all get away and the town still slumbers on.

With the chief deposed that leaves the town with a motorcycle sheik heavily armed with an automatic pistol, handcuffs and blackjack. These articles of war being dangled in true comic-opera fashion from the person of said officer. This, of course, is a gift to the grasswidows and flappers of Takoma and we are truly grateful, but what we really need is a real he-man police department that really protects the town instead of ogling the women.

Women are really afraid to stay alone during the day in certain parts of the town because there are no patrolmen or any kind of protection offered them.

I regret to record these facts, but they are true—too true to be ignored.

Largest American Enterprise in Cuba Contradicts Reports of Government Oppression.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Cuban Embassy has received the following cablegram:

"I will appreciate your making it known to the proper authorities of the United States Government that as an American resident in Cuba for nearly twenty years, having almost daily business contacts with the governmental departments of this country, I emphatically contradict and resent statements recently made in Washington to the effect that foreign residents in Cuba are being subjected to oppression or imposition on the part of the government, of which Gen. Machado is the chief executive.

"The American interests which I represent are the largest individual producers of sugar in the world, owning and operating more properties than any other sugar producing company in Cuba, and we have never yet been subjected to injustice or discrimination on the part of the Cuban government under its present administration.

(Signed.) "F. GERARD SMITH,
"Executive Vice President in Charge of Operations in Cuba of the Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation, and the Eastern Cuba Sugar Corporation, and Member of the Cuban Export Corporation and the American Chamber of Commerce."

East Executive Avenue Clogged With Parked Cars in Spite of Police Ban.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: East Executive avenue is posted against parking, yet almost every hour of the day it is filled with parked vehicles. Some of the cars bear out-of-town licenses, indicating that they are the property of tourists visiting the White House. Others, however, bear local tags of those of Maryland and Virginia. In addition to parked automobiles, the street at certain hours of the day is literally clogged with huge buses, parked, half-parked or jockeying for favorable position near the entrance driveway.

East Executive avenue is one of the most heavily traveled arteries of the city. Parking should be prohibited therein and the ban should be actual, not theoretical.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Mr. Churchill May Come to Capital Soon

Former Chancellor, Now in West, Expected Next Month.

By JEAN ELIOT.

WHILE Washington is concentrating on plans to entertain Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister of Great Britain, next month, several other distinguished Britishers are "at large" in this country, notably Mr. Winston Churchill, Lord Birkenhead and Sir Auckland Geddes. But at the moment there are no definite plans for any of them to visit the Capital.

It is expected that Mr. Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, illustrious son of an illustrious English father and a talented American mother, will come East—and, if he does, of course, to Washington—some time in October. But the British Embassy has as yet no information as to his plans and presumably he will not be in this part of the world until after Mr. MacDonald has come and gone. At present he is in California "seeing stars"—the cinema stars of Hollywood and the actual stars of the firmament—through the great telescopes of the Lick Observatory. He is the guest of Mr. William Randolph Hearst on his California ranch.

Mr. Churchill, long a stormy petrel of British politics, has held all manner of important government posts, his most recent service having been as Chancellor of the Exchequer. Mr. Philip Snowden, much in the news of late, succeeded him in this position when the Labor government came into power. Winston Churchill is, moreover, a tremendously picturesque figure. Distinguished as a soldier, a war correspondent and a statesman, he is also traveler, adventurer and artist—a jack of all trades and master of most of them. He has served in more wars, held more offices and practised more arts than most men of his time. His father, the late Lord Randolph Henry Spencer Churchill, was one of the striking personalities of the Victorian era. In his early youth there seemed to be some doubt as to the son's success in life and a friend of the older Churchill remarked, "You owe all you have achieved to the fact that you are 'Randy's' son." To this Winston Churchill is said to have replied, "Sir, the time is coming when Lord Randolph Churchill will be remembered chiefly as Winston Churchill's father."

Mr. Churchill's mother was Jennie Jerome, of New York. After the death of Lord Randolph Churchill, she married Mr. George Cornwallis-West and later still became Mrs. Montagu Porch. A writer of graceful reminiscences and once proprietor of and editor of the Anglo-Saxon Review, it is probable that Mr. Churchill inherited his literary gifts from her.

Sir Auckland Geddes is, of course, one of these English visitors in whom Washington has the greatest measure of personal interest, since he served as Ambassador to the United States for several years and since he and his charming American wife are happily remembered. He landed in New York Thursday from the Mauretania and explained that he had left England simply to escape the heat. Almost immediately, moreover, he ran into cool weather, which has continued since he landed. Perhaps, however, the fact that he has a son living in Baltimore had something to do with his visit. The lad, if memory serves, is Malcolm Ross Geddes, and he has a position with a Baltimore firm.

Sir Auckland is due to sail for England next Wednesday, so if he comes to Washington at all it will be within the next few days. He would find many old friends to give him a warm welcome here.

Lord Birkenhead, who was formerly Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain and previously held such posts as Solicitor General and Attorney General, has come to this country to study the operation of American public utilities and to obtain assistance from his American associates in solving the problems of the electric power industry in Great Britain. As the chairman of the Greater London and Counties Trust, Ltd., he is head of important power companies serving a considerable part of England. He will probably spend most of his time in New York.

President and Mrs. Hoover Have Overnight Guests.

The President and Mrs. Hoover have as guests Mr. Allan Fox, of New York; Mrs. William Hoffman, of Barrington, R. I., and Miss Frances Parks, of Louisville, Ky. They arrived at the White House last evening in time for dinner and remained over night.

Miss Eleanor Hard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hard, is visiting Dr. and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, Jr., in Boston and will make visits in Newport and New York before returning to Washington early in October.

Sir Esme and Lady Howard Will Return Tomorrow.

The British Ambassador and Lady Isabella Howard, who are at present in New York, will return to Washington tomorrow evening and will reopen the embassy for the season.

The Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Carlos G. Davila, arrived in Washington yesterday from Schenectady, N. Y., where he attended the celebration of independence of Chile.

The Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, is in New York where he went to say farewell to his son, Mr. Paul Mellon, who sailed yesterday on the S. S. Olympic for Europe. A graduate of Yale, where he took honors in literature and English composition, Mr. Mellon will take a post graduate course at Cambridge University.

The First Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Joseph M. Dixon, who recently returned to their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel from their home in Montana, have with them their daughter, Mrs. Alexander Dean, of New Haven, who will pass about two weeks in Washington. Their youngest daughter, Miss Peggy Dixon, has been with her brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Hills in Baltimore for a short time, but has joined her parents. She will attend Miss Maderia's School this winter.

The Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Francis White, has been joined by Mrs. White and their little daughter, who have been at Narragansett Pier, R. I., during the summer. Before going to Narragansett, Mrs. White spent some time visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Brewster, jr., in the Green Spring Valley.

Consul to Swatow, China, On Leave in Capital.

Mr. David C. Berger, United States Consul to Swatow, China, who is on a two-month leave of absence in this country, is now a guest at the Mayflower. Mr. Berger will divide his time between his former home in Pittsylvania County, Va., and Washington. He is a graduate of the Georgetown Foreign Service School, and has been on duty in China for nine years.

Dr. Hubert Work is the guest of Senator Charles Waterman in the latter's apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, whose late husband was Secretary of Agriculture in the Wilson administration, has arrived in town from Des Moines, Ia., and will be at the Mayflower Hotel for several weeks. With her is her niece, Miss Edna Meredith, of Buhl, Idaho, who will attend Miss Madeira's school.

The Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Capt. Luigi Notarbartolo di Villarosa, will entertain at the dinner dance this evening in the Gold Room of the Wardman Park Hotel.

Miss Ruth Nebeker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Knowlton Nebeker, and Ensign Edward Allen Hannegan, U. S. N., whose marriage is taking place today, were the guests in whose honor Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Moyle entertained at a large dinner last evening at the Congressional Country Club. Mrs. Moyle is a sister of Miss Nebeker.

Mrs. Frank S. Hight and her son, Mr. Frank S. Hight, jr., have rejoined Mr. Hight in Washington, coming from their country home, Woodland Farm, Canaan, N. H. They are temporarily at the Willard, but will reopen their house in Twenty-first street today. Miss Phyllis Hight, now visiting in Columbia, Ohio, will arrive in town on Monday.

Mrs. Frederick E. McCormick-Goodhart has returned to her estate, Langley Park, in Maryland, after spending the summer in her home at Bar Harbor.

Engagement Recently Announced

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS VIRGINIA BELT,

daughter of Mrs. Alvin G. Belt, whose engagement has been announced to Mr. Ennalls Waggaman, jr., son of Maj. and Mrs. Ennalls Waggaman. The wedding will take place in the early autumn.

Tea and Dance Will Be Given For Debutante

Miss Laura Tuckerman Will Be Presented in November.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, whose daughter, Miss Laura Tuckerman, is to be a debutante this season, will give a small tea on November 14 at Tuxeden, their home at Edgemoor, to present Miss Tuckerman to their friends and next evening, November 15, they will have a small dance for her also at Tuxeden. They will entertain a house party of young people for the occasion, their guests remaining over the week-end and attending the debutante ball at the Willard on November 16. Mrs. Tuckerman is chairman of the committee for this fete, to which most of the debutantes—or more properly the mothers of the debutantes—will be subscribers.

Miss Tuckerman is the eldest of Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman's several daughters. The others are rapidly growing up and will presumably supply a debutante every year or two for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, who have been spending the summer, with their children, at their home at Baddeck, Nova Scotia, will return to Washington about the middle of October.

Their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Coville, are en route from Tokio, where Mr. Coville is stationed at the American Embassy, to join Mr. and Mrs. Grosvenor at their summer home in the North and will also visit them for some time at their home near Bethesda. They are now on a three-month vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Paxton Blair, of New York, the latter formerly Miss Gertrude Grosvenor, are also passing the summer in Nova Scotia, where they have a summer home close to that of Mr. and Mrs. Grosvenor.

Miss Rebecca Wellington, daughter of Mrs. John R. Wellington, will return to Washington on Sunday after a visit in New York.

Dr. and Mrs. Dennis Reopen Residence.

Dr. Alfred P. Dennis, vice chairman of the U. S. Tariff Commission, and Mrs. Dennis have reopened for the season their house at 800 Twenty-first street. Mrs. Dennis and her sons, Alfred P. Dennis, jr., and John V. Dennis, having returned to town from Hot Springs, Va., where they spent the summer. Dr. Dennis was in town most of the summer, having been detained by his duties in connection with the framing of the new tariff legislation.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Gore have returned to Washington after passing the summer in Canada. Their son, Mr. Philip Gore, has gone to Princeton to resume his studies at Princeton University.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Eberhart Hayes, who have been in Honolulu all summer, are again in town and will make their home here in future. They landed Monday in New York after having made the trip from California through the Panama Canal. Mrs. Hayes was formerly Miss Frances Larner Gorse.

Miss Lucie R. Thomas, of Falls Church, Va., sailed yesterday on the S. S. Olympic for Europe and will go to Winterthur, Switzerland, to stay indefinitely with relatives. Afterward she will visit Paris and the Riviera.

Engaged Couple Honored at Dinner.

Miss Margaret Cranford and Mr. Joseph De Ronde Cranford entertained at dinner last night at the Columbia Country Club for Miss Charlotte Benson O'Shaughnessy and Mr. William Henry Cranford, who will be married on Wednesday, September 25. Miss Cranford, who is a sister of the bridegroom, is to be a bridesmaid and Mr. Joseph Cranford is also a member of the wedding party.

The guests at the dinner included Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Verne Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Call Dickinson, Miss Sarah Major, Miss Ruth Gullion, Miss Virginia Buell, Miss Lilla LaGarde, Miss Francis Hill, Miss Josephine Snowden, Mr. Louis J. Rauber, Mr. Richard Wird, Mr. Percy Cranford, jr., Mr. Richard Schulze, Mr. Carl Davis, Mr. Oscar Giese, Mr. Bruce Colton, Mr. Smith Bowman, jr., Mr. William Winstead, Mr. Charles R. SOPHISTICATION—alluring

In fact, more alluring than ever—for a very clever person has designed this new millinery fashion that brings a sophistication, more striking, more "individual" than we have known for many seasons. A fine, supple, black felt gives its exclusive interpretation of the new 1929-1930 millinery silhouette. $35.

MILLINERY, THIRD FLOOR

ZIP—it's fastened

One might almost call this clever sports tweed "fashion's fun frock"—for there is a decided delight in zipping the smart Zip It fastenings, that mark it "newest-of-the-new" in youthful sports and school frocks. Rust, brown or black. $25.

FUR—a new place for it

And what better place could one find for it to be admired than on youth's new afternoon frocks. This young fashion — because of its ultra-fashionable fur yoke treatment and fur belt—finds as much popularity at sorority teas, "bridges" and matinees, as the very young people themselves. Brown, tomato red. $35.

The Seven Dials Mystery - - -

A Serial Story by AGATHA CHRISTIE.

"Why are men so happy when they're single," said Loraine tragically.

THE STORY THUS FAR.

There's a house party on at Chimneys, an estate outside London, occupied for the present on lease by Sir Oswald and Lady Coote. Guests are late to breakfast, especially Jimmy Thesiger and Gerry Wade, much to the annoyance of Lady Coote.

Rupert Bateman, secretary to Sir Oswald, suggests an alarm clock by way of ensuring that Wade in particular gets up next morning at a more reasonable hour. They plan to place eight clocks in Wade's room once he is asleep. Bateman, known as "Pongo," places the clocks, and yet next day at noon Wade is still in bed. At 12:30 he is found dead by a servant. Dr. Cariwright declared death due to an overdose of sleeping powder. Seven clocks, not eight, are found lined up in Wade's room. Thesiger and Ronny Devereux motor to Gerry's home to inform a sister, Loraine Wade, of her brother's death.

Days elapse. Lord Caterham, owner, is back at Chimneys. Lady Eileen Brent, his daughter, known to her friends and society as "Bundle," finds a letter written by Wade to his sister clearly indicating that his death was not accidental and making reference to the Seven Dials. Next day, while motoring to town, Bundle thinks she has run down a man who staggered from a hedge into the road. He proves to be Ronny Devereux, who mysteriously shot and dying, whispers: "Seven Dials . . . tell . . . Jimmy Thesiger."

Bundle learns of a place in London called Seven Dials. Cabinet Minister George Lomax has received a warning letter from a secret society. Her friend, Bill Eversleigh, provides Thesiger's address. She is all set to solve two murders. At Jimmy's quarters Bundle meets Loraine Wade unexpectedly. She tells of having seen a mysterious letter to Gerry.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY.

"Sure?" asked Jimmy very gently.

Loraine laughed for the first time. "I know what you think, and I admit that women are curious. But, you see, this didn't even look interesting. It was a kind of list of names and dates."

"Names and dates," said Jimmy thoughtfully.

"Gerry didn't seem to mind much," continued Loraine. "He laughed. He asked me if I had ever heard of the Mafia, and then said it would be queer if a society like the Mafia started in England—but that that kind of a secret society didn't take on much with English people. 'Our criminals,' he said, 'haven't got a picturesque imagination.'"

Jimmy pursed up his lips into a whistle.

"I'm beginning to see," he said. "Seven Dials must be the headquarters of some secret society. As he says in his letter to you, he thought it rather a joke to start with. But evidently it wasn't a joke—he says as much. And there's something else; his anxiety that you should forget what he'd told you. There can be only one reason for that—if that society suspected that you had any knowledge of its activity, you too would be in danger. Gerald realized the peril, and he was terribly anxious—for you."

He stopped, then went on quietly: "I rather fancy that we're all going to be in danger—if we go on with this."

"If——?" cried Bundle indignantly. "I'm talking of you two. It's different for me. I was poor old Ronny's pal." He looked at Bundle.

"You've done your bit. You've delivered the message he sent me. No; for God's sake keep out of it, you and Loraine."

How to Begin?

Bundle looked questioningly at the other girl. Her own mind was definitely made up, but she gave no indication of it just then. She had no wish to push Loraine Wade into a dangerous undertaking. But Loraine's small face was alight at once with indignation.

"You say that! Do you think for one minute I'd be contented to keep out of it—when they killed Gerry—my own dear Gerry, the best and dearest and kindest brother any girl ever had. The only person belonging to me I had in the whole world!"

Jimmy cleared his throat uncomfortably. Loraine, he thought, was wonderful; simply wonderful.

"Look here," he said awkwardly, "you mustn't say that. About being alone in the world—all that rot. You've got lots of friends—only too glad to do what they can. See what I mean?"

It is possible that Loraine did, for she suddenly blushed, and to cover her confusion began to talk nervously.

"That's settled," she said. "I'm going to help. Nobody's going to stop me."

"And so am I, of course," said Bundle.

They both looked at Jimmy.

"Yes," he said slowly. "Yes, quite so."

They looked at him inquiringly.

"I was just wondering," said Jimmy, "how we were going to begin."

PLANS.

JIMMY'S words lifted the discussion at once into a more practical sphere.

"All things considered," he said, "we haven't got much to go on. In fact, just the words Seven Dials. As a matter of fact I don't even know exactly where Seven Dials is. But, anyway, we can't very well comb out the whole of that district, house by house."

"We could," said Bundle.

"Well, perhaps we could eventually—though I'm not so sure. I imagine it's a well-populated area. But it wouldn't be very subtle."

The word reminded him of the girl Socks and he smiled.

"Then, of course, there's the part of the country where Ronny was shot. We could nose around there. But the police are probably doing everything we could do, and doing it much better."

"What I like about you," said Bundle sarcastically, "is your cheerful and optimistic disposition."

"Never mind her, Jimmy," said Loraine softly. "Go on."

"Don't be so impatient," said Jimmy to Bundle. "All the best sleuths approach a case this way, by eliminating unnecessary and unprofitable investigation. I'm coming now to the third alternative—Gerald's death.

"Now that we know it was murder—by the way, you do both believe that, don't you?"

"Yes," said Loraine.

"Yes," said Bundle.

"Good. So do I. Well, it seems to me that there we do stand some faint chance. After all, if Gerry didn't take the chloral himself, some one must have got into his room and put it there—dissolved it in the glass of water, so that when he woke up he drank it off. And of course left the empty box or bottle or whatever it was. You agree with that?"

"Ye-es," said Bundle, slowly. "But——"

How About Servants.

"Wait. And that some one must have been in the house at the time. It can't very well have been some one from outside."

"No," agreed Bundle, more readily this time.

"Very well. Now, that narrows down things considerably. To begin with, I suppose a good many of the servants are family ones—they're your lot, I mean."

"Yes," said Bundle. "Practically all the staff stayed when we let it. All the principal ones are there still—of course, there have been changes among the underservants."

"Exactly—that's what I am getting at. You"—he addressed Bundle—"must go into all that. Find out when new servants were engaged—what about footmen, for instance?"

"One of the footmen is new. John, his name is."

"Well, make inquiries about John. And about any others who have come recently."

"I suppose," said Bundle slowly, "it must have been a servant. It couldn't have been one of the guests?"

"I don't see how that's possible."

"Who were there exactly?"

"Well, there were three girls—Nancy and Helen and Socks——"

"Socks Daventry? I know her."

"May have been. Girl who was always saying things were subtle."

"That's Socks all right. Subtle is one of her words."

"And then there were Gerry Wade and me and Bill Eversleigh and Ronny. And, of course, Sir Oswald and Lady Coote. Oh! and Pongo."

"Who's Pongo?"

"Chap called Bateman—secretary to old Coote. Solemn sort of cove but very conscientious. I was at school with him."

"There doesn't seem anything very suspicious there," remarked Loraine.

"No, there doesn't," said Bundle. "As you say, we'll have to look among the servants. By the way, you don't suppose that clock being thrown out of the window had anything to do with it."

"A clock thrown out of the window," said Jimmy, staring. It was the first he had heard of it.

The Seven Clocks.

"I can't see how it can have anything to do with it," said Bundle. "But it's odd somehow. There seems no sense in it."

"I remember," said Jimmy slowly. "I went in to—to see poor old Gerry, and there were the clocks ranged along the mantelpiece. I remember noticing there were only seven—not eight."

He gave a sudden shiver and explained himself apologetically.

"Sorry. But somehow those clocks have always given me the shivers. I dream of them sometimes. I'd hate to go into that room in the dark and see them there in a row."

"You wouldn't be able to see them if it was dark," said Bundle practically. "Not unless they had luminous dials—oh!" She gave a sudden gasp and the color rushed into her cheeks. "Don't you see? Seven Dials!"

The others looked at her doubtfully, but she insisted with increasing vehemence.

"It must be. It can't be a coincidence."

There was a pause.

"You may be right," said Jimmy Thesiger at last. "It's—it's dashed odd."

Bundle started questioning him eagerly.

"Who bought the clocks?"

"All of us."

"Who thought of them?"

"All of us."

"Nonsense, somebody must have thought of them first."

"It didn't happen that way. We were discussing what we could do to get Gerry up, and Pongo said an alarm clock, and somebody said one would be no good, and somebody else—Bill Eversleigh, I think—said why not get a dozen. And we all said good egg and hoofed off to get them. We got one each and an extra one for Pongo and one for Lady Coote—just out of the generosity of our hearts. There was nothing premeditated about it—it just happened."

Secretaries Join Y. W. C. A. Staff

Four New Workers Are Introduced to Board of Directors.

Four new secretaries, the Misses Lucy Street, Marion W. Hunt, Dorot Latham and Florence Hillengass, were officially added to the staff of the Young Women's Christian Association at the September meeting of the board of directors Thursday at the administration building, Seventeenth and K streets.

Miss Street will act as secretary of the music division, the Misses Hunt and Latham will assist in the health education division, while Miss Hillengass will be assigned to the Elizabeth Somers residence. The board received reports on summer activities of the association, including Camp Kahlert, by Mrs. Harold E. Doyle; Vacation Lodge, by Mrs. Ben T. Webster; Girl Reserves, by Miss Elsa Peterson, and Miss Mabel Charest, newly appointed general secretary, on the general summer work.

Plans were completed for the annual autumn setting-up conference on September 30, at the administration building.

Preparations were likewise made for the registration of girls and women in the education classes for the winter on September 23.

Potomac Anglers' Club To Hold Annual Outing

The tenth annual excursion of the Potomac Anglers Association will be held tomorrow at Chesapeake Beach, Md., where several hundred fishing enthusiasts, including many women, are expected to gather.

A fleet of twenty boats, commanded by Capt. Noah Hazard, will take the excursionists to choice fishing grounds, and catches, for which ten prizes will be awarded, will be weighed in on the pier at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. John S. Cole is chairman of the excursion committee, and officers of the association are Dr. D'Arcy Magee, president; Robert Wilson, secretary, and F. D. Barstow, treasurer.

Lindbergh Lands In Santiago, Cuba

Will Continue His Flight to South America Today.

Santiago de Cuba, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, flying to South America and Caribbean territory, landed in the gathering dusk here this evening at 6:02 o'clock, where he will spend the night before taking off for San Juan, Porto Rico, tomorrow morning. It was necessary for the colonel to swing his plane in sharply in stopping on the short field. He was greeted by military and civil officials and thousands of spectators also were on hand.

Warmly demonstrating their delight at seeing Mrs. Lindbergh, the reception committee presented flowers to her. Tonight Col. Lindbergh and his party will be guests at a reception given by Gov. Silva at the palace.

The take-off tomorrow will be at 7 o'clock, the first stop being Port au Prince, Haiti, with Santo Domingo as the next halt before reaching San Juan.

Dietary Lecture Scheduled.

"The Chemistry of Food" will be discussed by G. A. Crist before the Workers' School, 805½ Tenth street northwest, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The public is invited.

No matter in which part of Washington you happen to be you won't be far from one of these new Lord Baltimore Filling Stations.

Recently completed, these stations make it still easier for Washingtonians to get Lord Baltimore super-service and super-products.

These four latest additions include the most modern facilities for your convenience: broad, concrete drives; ample room for complete lubrication service; modern air cabinets. The stations are conveniently located, too--on corners which you are certain to pass on your travels around the city.

Drive in and get acquainted. You need no introduction to AMOCO-GAS, ORANGE AMERICAN GAS or AMOCO MOTOR OIL. But get to know these latest additions to Lord Baltimore service.

MORAL TRAINING BY EXAMPLE

Every reform was once a private opinion, and when it shall be a private opinion again, it will solve the moral problems of the day.

Much evil can be traced to our disregard for the effect our actions may have upon others.

We believe that we see our ideals exemplified by some person. Immediately we attempt to follow his course of action.

Example is a great influence in the moral training of youth.

Every normal child looks upon his father or mother as to the ideal on which to pattern his life.

Do you want your son or daughter to pattern after you?

It is not enough to tell a child what to do. The child mind must have something tangible to guide its steps.

One person with a sincere purpose may lead a whole army, but a whole army of indifferentists cannot lead an individual.

Unless a condition is a matter of life and death, we are inclined to pay little heed to that which may result.

One reason why people seem to be nonentities and why they are discontented with their progress is because they are indifferent to opportunities for self-improvement.

If the world is to advance morally, we ourselves must pave the way for it.

Border Patrol Routs Mexican Rumrunners

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—More than 200 rounds of ammunition were fired by United States border patrolmen in two pitched battles with a band of Mexican rumrunners on Cordova Island, near here, last night.

The rumrunners were repulsed in their attempt to bring a big cargo of liquor across the Rio Grande. Three Mexicans, two of them 15-year-old "spotters," were arrested and two of the smugglers, apparently wounded, were seen crawling into the brush on the Mexican side.

Marshal Kills Farmer For Resisting Arrest

Augusta, Ark., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Tillman Wilkerson, about 65, a farmer living near Augusta, was shot to death on Main street here early today by Bedford Montague, night marshal.

Montague said the shooting resulted from Wilkerson resisting arrest on a minor charge.

GERMAN INDUSTRY EYES YOUNG PLAN

Intends to Use Influence Once Method Goes Into Effect.

SOCIALISM SEEN AHEAD

Dusseldorf, Germany, Sept. 20 (A. P.).—Although discussion of the Young plan is officially ruled out during the two-day convention of the League of German Industrialists which began today, nevertheless this latest and final attempt to settle the reparations issue is dominating the thoughts of Germany's captains of industry gathered here from every part of Germany.

While they accept as a fact the indorsement of the plan by the parliamentary bodies of the countries involved, they indicate that they propose to have a great deal to say as to what shall happen in Germany once the Young plan becomes operative.

The main question that is uppermost in the minds of the industrialists, as indicated here, is: Shall the saving of 700,000,000 marks under the Young plan as compared with the annuities under the Dawes plan be used to lower taxes and thereby give industry a chance slowly to accumulate capital again, which in turn should mean lowering the present high cost of money, or shall the 700,000,000 marks saved be invested in additional social measures, such as higher unemployment doles, civil playgrounds and "extension of the experiment in state socialism?"

W. F. Kalle, a member of the board of directors of the German dye trust, at the close of the first day's session, sought to point out what he believed to be the errors of Germany's present and economic industrial policy. Preceding him, Carl Duisburg had only briefly taken issue with present "socialistic" tendencies, while Ludwig Kastl had confined himself more to an analysis of international economic problems.

Herr Kalle expressed the opinion that the "Marxian doctrine is casting its rays far into the ranks of the bourgeoisie and officialdom. Accordingly we have reached a development heading straight for state socialism. Instead, in the time of greatest need and of the obligation to pay tremendous tribute of reducing the government machinery in the nation, state and commune to a minimum, and economizing wherever possible, and instead of avoiding all expense which is not absolutely essential we have seen the very opposite occur in recent years."

Blind Senator Comes To Capital in Plane

Senator Thomas D. Schall, of Minnesota, blind legislator, with T. F. Kelley, of Minneapolis, flew to Washington yesterday from Battle Creek, Mich. They arrived at the Washington Airport shortly after noon in a Northwestern Airways plane, piloted by Ed Whitman.

The senator was in Battle Creek and was picked up by Kelley, who has been on an air tour of the United States. They also brought the senator's German police dog in the plane.

Novelist's Chef Gets Marriage Annulment

Blas Reyes, chef employed by Mary Roberts Rhinehart, the novelist, was awarded an annulment of his marriage to Mrs. Ada Sinclair Carson Reyes, in District Supreme Court yesterday. The order was signed by Justice Wendell P. Stafford.

Reyes won the annulment on the allegation that his wife's first husband was living and that she had not been divorced at the time of their marriage. Attorneys Raymond Neudecker and William C. Ashford represented Reyes.

IN THE PLAY HOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

When the local gendarmes went to see what all the swearing was about in "The Front Page" they found only one objectionable line—not a flock of them, as some one erroneously reported. That line was the last. It came just before the curtain dropped on the final scene and, in the language of the lots, was a wow! Well, it's out now and all the good citizens may drop into the National on any of the final performances and fall to have their sensibilities shattered.

Just to show that the newspaper boys of Washington appreciate one who makes a perfect job portraying a reporter, a gang of them got together last night in the Press Club and threw a little party for Lee Tracy, star of "The Front Page." It happened that the local contingent was able to present Mr. Tracy with the living embodiment of his character portrayal—young Eddie Folliard, of The Washington Post staff. Eddie is the soul of Hildy Johnson, the stage reporter, who is the central figure in all the doings of "The Front Page." The only difference is, nobody ever gave Eddie a watch, but they have to watch him just the same.

From the way the telegrams read, the new show at the Belasco next Monday night, "June Moon," is interesting a number of persons, friends of Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman, the authors. It seems that there is going to be a good turn out of newspapermen at the premiere and those interested want the first string critics, as the expression has it. Just what a first string critic is only Philander Johnson is able to say; but it has nothing to do whatsoever with a G. String critic, who comes under the head of music. The new play, "June Moon," has to do with the song writing business; so possibly the G. String critics should have the right of way.

Peter Borras was good enough to send a telegram inviting the dramatic staff to be present at the Madrillon reopening, but it happened that the annual banquet of the Vinegar Club was being held that night, Wednesday, in Ellicott City, with Thomas Hunt Mayfield the honor guest; so the tuxedo parade started that way. "Jack," to his friends, Mayfield, had just tipped the scales of 50 years, celebrating a half century in Maryland and confines, and the party didn't break up until last night. The consolation of all this is that these affairs happen only once a year.

It seems the Theater Guild is having some trouble up Boston way with the censors. The city fathers won't let Eugene O'Neill's play, "Strange Interlude," see the light of theater there, if they can help it. However, there is plenty of time to stage a battle, in or out of court, as the opening is not scheduled until a week from Monday. The first salvo was fired by the Theater Guild forces over the radio, broadcasting their opinion of Boston officials from the head man down.

Tomorrow night we are all invited down to the National to see Lew Leslie's "Blackbirds," the first all-colored troupe to play Mr. Harry Rapley's playhouse ever—so it is averred. When "Porgy" came along, three or four white men were used as policemen, or something like that; but "Blackbirds" is just that way. Steve Cochran, who saw it five or six times in New York, claims it to be the funniest show of the decade.

"What is the age of innocence?" asks T. D. Bonneville, manager of Poli's, and from the naive way in which he propounds the question, 'twould seem he wants this answer: "The Age of Innocence" is the play dramatized from Edith Wharton's novel of the same name, the play starring Katherine Cornell and opening in Poli's Theater next Monday night.

sophistication that trickles through the horns that render the modern screen articulate. The proof seems to lie in the fact that "The Letter," "The Awful Truth" and "The Lady Lies" have been knockout hits in the cities and very fine flops in the small towns. Pa and Ma can't quite handle the fast ones yet.

Speaking of talking and singing pictures, if you still entertain that overwhelming desire to know all about what ails many of the sound and dialogue subjects that have done everything but knock your ears off, read the profound Sabbath lead in tomorrow's big photoplay section of The Washington Post, the Capital's greatest NEWSpaper—5 cents a smash at all newsstands. (Adv.)

And if you think Lee Tracy, playing the part of a newspaper man in "The Front Page," at the National, doesn't know what it's all about and reads only my office mate, Mr. Daly's, column pertaining to his own wing of the theater, come in and I'll let you read the letter.

Some of the boys tossed a party for Mr. Tracy at the Press Club last night just to prove how much he looks like Eddie Folliard.

I'm scared stiff for fear I missed that one, too!

Apartment hunting is far from a pleasant task. Why not look in the classified columns of The Washington Post. Perhaps the very place you are looking for is advertised today.

City and Hotel Owners Are Sued for $20,000

Lillie B. Moody, of the Portland Hotel, filed suit in District Supreme Court yesterday against William L. Browning and Bates Warren, of the Southern Building, and the District of Columbia, seeking to recover $20,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been suffered when she fell on an ice-covered pavement on January 30, 1928.

Browning and Warren are sued as owners of the premises known as the Franklin Square Hotel, Fourteenth and K streets northwest, and the District of Columbia as a municipal corporation charged with the duty of keeping the streets, sidewalks and alleys in reasonable safe condition for pedestrians. She alleges that it was the duty of all three defendants to see that the ice and snow were kept off the pavement. She is represented by Attorney Ralph A. Cusick.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

IF any notion of a continuing leave of absence from the duties devolving upon this substantial oaken desk had lingered in mind, this week has been ample to knock it higher than Gilhooley's kite—than which there was probably never a kite higher!

First, there was "Mike" Cullen's midnight screening of "The Trespasser," Gloria Swanson's first talking and singing picture that has them rolling in the aisles in London, which I missed; then Peter Boras' season's opening at the Madrillon, also foozled, hungry as I was. Now comes one of those elegant pin-seal pocket folds containing an annual pass to the Rialto as a gift from Jimmie Carrier.

There seems to be no way to retrieve the screening or the supper, but if Mr. Carrier thinks his credentials are going to be a stranger to his doorman, he's non compos mentis, or ne plus ultra—or something!

After having fiddled around for many months without getting anywhere in the matter of story material, Paul Whiteman came back to the East, and, in conference with Lou Metzger, Universal general manager, reached an agreement in no time, flat. John Murray Anderson, whose unit shows have played the Palace for many weeks and whose "Greenwich Village Follies" almost became an institution, has been commissioned to have a story ready for the monumental maestro not later than November 1. The hitch has been that Whiteman has refused to undertake anything that would make him appear to consider himself an actor. In the meantime, he has only been drawing $8,000 per week from Papa Laemmle.

Not an actor—merely a wizard.

It is forecast among the boys in the know that A. J. Balaban, partner of Sam Katz, is to take over direction of Paramount production. A job.

Emil Jannings' first picture for U. F. A., to be directed by Josef von Sternberg in Germany, will be recorded in English as well as German, according to latest advice from the Berlin office of U. F. A. Jannings' part, the communication states, is such as to enable him to make use of both his native tongue and the one that was supposed to have been the reason for his departure from the West Coast studios.

Paramount announces that David Mendoza, long conductor of the New York Capitol Theater Orchestra, under both Roxy and Maj. Bowes—or am I thinking of a couple of other fellows?—has been signed as conductor and general music director of the Paramount-Publix Radio Orchestra. He will assume his new duties on the initial broadcast of the Paramount program over the Columbia network tonight.

Richard Barthelmess is learning to speak Chinese, if a press agent fairy tale that has just come to hand is on the level! It is said that he is being tutored in the language so that he can more ably portray his role of a Celestial youth in "Son of the Gods." You can't fool me, fellow; you've got hold of a "Broken Blossoms" press book!

Six of the original songs sung by Ramon Novarro in "Devil May Care" have been composed by Herbert Stothart and Clifford Grey. Now, maybe we will be able to tell whether the Mexican star is a barytone or a tenor. The "Pagan Love Song," in "The Pagan," made it a fielder's choice.

Ralph Spence, highest priced of all the title writers, has returned to the Fox lot for the first time in many years, to write the dialogue for a new starring vehicle for Vic McLaglen. Raoul Walsh, who wrote the story, will direct and Fifi Dorsay will pinch-hit for Lily Damita.

The talkies have started more things! The latest is a new line of thought among the amusement seekers of the hinterland. Those among the so-called yokelry who have written their own lines for the silent pictures for years are inclined to be just a little startled at some of the

Many Cities Tonight Offe Stage Stars

Popular Radio Entertainers Among Others Over WMAL—P. T. Barnum Dramatized Over WRC at 7—Guitar Music.

Another group of motion picture and stage stars, together with popular radio entertainers, will make up the program of the second weekly Paramount-Publix Radio Hour to be broadcast over the coast-to-coast network of the Columbia Broadcasting System, including WMAL, at 9 o'clock. Such entertainers as Gary Cooper, Lillian Roth, Hal Skelly, Victor Schertzinger, David Mendoza, Jeanette MacDonald, Art Frank, Ed and Morton Beck and two Paramount orchestras will provide the program. From New York to Hollywood, to Denver, to Chicago and back to New York will be the routine on station control.

After the opening at the studios of Station WABC, where David Mendoza will conduct the orchestra, the program will be transferred to the Uptown Theater, Chicago, where Art Frank and the stage unit of "Rah, Rah, Rah" will be heard in songs and patter. Then the microphone will be opened in Denver to pick up Ed and Morton Beck, appearing there.

From Denver, listeners will be carried to the Hollywood studios, where a program will be introduced by Gary Cooper, who has just completed his latest starring vehicle, "The Virginian." As the first part of this portion of the program, an orchestra will play under the direction of Nathaniel Finston, followed by Jeanette MacDonald, musical comedy star soon to be seen and heard on the screen in "The Love Parade," starring Maurice Chevalier. Hal Skelly, whose recent picture, "The Dance of Life" will be presented in a sketch written especially for him, as will Lillian Roth, who will sing several of the songs from her latest picture.

The program will be returned to New York, where Victor Schertzinger will play a medley of his own compositions on the violin, accompanied by a special orchestra.

WMAL will broadcast the Nit Wit Hour at 7 o'clock, followed by the Romanders and "Joe and Vi." Evelyn Novak, soprano, will sing an historical folk song during the broadcast of Romany Patterson at 8:30 o'clock.

P. T. Barnum, showman extraordinary, is the subject of the Lyric Famous Challenge to be broadcast at 7 o'clock. The challenging incident in his life which will be dramatized this evening deals with his sponsorship of Jenny Lind.

An orchestral arrangement of Chaminade's piano number, "The Flatterer," is featured in the broadcast of the General Electric Hour, which will be heard through WRC at 8 o'clock. Elizabeth Lennox, contralto, will sing Brahms' "Lullaby." She will also be heard with the orchestra in Leo Edwards' "New Southern Suite," a novelty which pictures four plantation episodes that range from morning through midnight. Other selections will include the Zampa Overture, by Herold; "Fleurette," Herbert; selections from "Caucasian Sketches," Ippolitow-Iwanow, and "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner.

The Lucky Strike Dance Orchestra will be presented for the hour beginning at 9 o'clock, to be immediately followed by "Amos 'n' Andy."

The gay merrymaking of the Latin Quarter and the stately ceremonies of the Empress Eugenie's court are Parisian scenes pictured in slumber music which Ludwig Laurier and a string ensemble will present at 10:15 o'clock, as follows: "Fete Boheme" from "Scenes Pittoresques L'Arlesienne," Massenet; selection from "The Dollar Princess," Fall; "Tout Paris," Waldeteufel; "Extase," Ganne; and "Evening Devotion," Monier.

A special National Grange program will be presented during the national farm and home hour at 1:30 o'clock, from WRC, followed by the band of a thousand melodies and the RCA demonstration hour.

A program of mandolin and guitar music, under the direction of Walter T. Holt, will be heard from WOL at 6:10 o'clock, followed by dinner music and Jeannette Leipsiger, pianist. Maj. H. C. Maddux will speak at 7 o'clock about the beauties and attractions of Washington as a vacation spot. The Silver String Revelers have been scheduled for 7:40 o'clock.

Station WJSV will present the usual program between 7 o'clock and midnight.

"Parking With Peggy"

"Uncle Bob says it's the girls of the family who should be called striplings."

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

A Pessimistic View.

DEAR MISS McDONALD: I have been interested for some time in reading the letters in your column, although, I must say, some of it is certainly scandalous. It is a deplorable fact that young women of today do not seem to know their places or bearings. They are employing themselves too much with things that have always, in the past, belonged to the man and too little with home-making. Immodest dressing, immoral actions, and the pursuit of harmful and frivolous entertainment seems to be occupying their minds to the exclusion of everything worth while or beneficial.

A girl should train herself from childhood up to be a true lady and do nothing that might seem even questionable. Her chief object should be to make a lovable but competent and economical wife when she attains the proper age. If this were true, there would be more happy marriages and homes and fewer families would be wrecked in the divorce court through women's frivolity and foolishness.

As for myself, I am 33 years of age and am, for the present, keeping house for my father and two younger sisters, who are teachers in the public school of our home town. I have had schooling sufficient to enable me to carry on a conversation intelligently with any one on subjects suitable to women, or to solve any problem I may meet in the future. I have also read a number of good books under the supervision of my father. It seems to me that college and university education just ruin a young woman. A moderate schooling should suffice for a woman to bring up a family intelligently, and she should work only until she marries. I am engaged to a young man with whom I have been keeping company for eight years, and we are to be married as soon as things can conveniently be arranged for my family. I have always been a lady in dress and manner and have tried to conduct myself in such a way that no deed of mine would ever be considered questionable. I try to spend my spare time profitably and in a way that my entertainment may have an uplifting rather than a degrading influence on others. But for this I have been laughed at all my life, and I consider my sisters behave disgracefully. They stay out till all hours, make fun of everything, and just live for "good times."

I blame their college "training" for their frivolous outlook. And where I have had three offers of marriage, they have had none. To this they reply that they would not even go out with the fellows who asked me to marry them. But I am sure in a few years they would gladly take any one. When I talk to them they just howl and ridicule me, and tell their wild boy friends about it.

I honestly do not know what is going to become of them. And I wish the men would give their opinions of such frivolous girls and their fate.

WORRIED SISTER.

Cool Spell Brings Out All Stations

WBAC Alone Interfered With by Cleveland. Disregard Noted of Rule Requiring Call Letter Announcement.

By ROBERT D. HEINL.

The 1929-30 radio season is at last at hand. Atmospheric conditions produced by the cool spell last night and the night before brought in stations all over the dial. And the best is yet to come. From now until the middle of March static will be at its minimum and no doubt every radio set will be working overtime.

A joyous station we came across was WMMN, at Fairmont, W. Va. (890 kilocycles). It sounded like one of the WLS Saturday night barn dances. Our next door neighbor, WBAL, in Baltimore, however, was being seriously interfered with by station WTAM, at Cleveland. Though WBAL was using 10,000 watts, twenty times as much power as WMMN, it was not heard in Washington as clearly as the diminutive West Virginian.

Stations WBAL and WTAM are only ten kilocycles apart on the spectrum, the former being assigned to 1,060 kilocycles and the latter to 1,070. We finally succeeded in separating them, but neither station was coming into the Capital as it should.

Another thing noticed was the absolute disregard of the Federal regulation requiring stations to announce their call letters every 15 minutes. As the night wore on not one station in five announced its call letters at any where near the proper intervals.

Very flagrant was a talk being broadcast by Middle Western station regarding a treatment for an incurable disease. The Radio Commission has no powers of censorship but it would seem that if representatives of the American Medical Association or the postal authorities, if the issue of the magazine containing the offer is to be circulated in the mails, tuned in on this station they might be inclined to start something.

Following his participation in the dedicatory exercises of their new building in New York heard here over Station WMAL, William S. Paley, head of the Columbia System, was swamped with congratulations, not so much for the building achievement, as might be supposed, but for the way this 27-year-old executive acquitted himself in his speech over the radio immediately following that of President Hoover.

Broadcasters themselves are, as a rule, the worst talkers in the world and in addition to this, when they are required to take their own medicine they usually almost pass out from microphone fright. Having to appear on the same bill with the President of the United States would be enough to shake the nerve of the most experienced speaker, but, according to Sam Pickard, vice president of Columbia, Mr. Paley, who had only spoken on the radio once before in his life, was quite composed.

If he was not, there was surely no evidence of it in his talk and surely nothing in his deep voice, sounding much like that of Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, to indicate that the speaker, although the head of one of the largest broadcasting companies in the world, was still only in his twenties.

A graduate of Pennsylvania University, born in Chicago and raised in Philadelphia, young Paley, up to his affiliation with Columbia a year ago, was the vice president and advertising manager of a large and prosperous cigar company founded by his father.

Mr. Paley, in his radio talk, said that two years ago the Columbia Broadcasting System did not exist, but that on this night, 47 stations were in the hookup to carry President Hoover's voice from coast to coast.

Also that where in the beginning Columbia was on the air ten hours a week they are now on 100 hours a week. A great achievement, of course, is acquiring their own building in so short a space of time, and credit for this is given to Paley.

Evidently good fortune has also been visited upon another young man in whom Washingtonians are interested—Capt. Howard Angus, formerly in charge of the press room at the War Department, more latterly handling public relations for the Radio Corporation of America, but who has now been placed in charge of the radio department of Batten, Barton & Durstine, of New York, one of the largest advertising agencies in the United States. Capt. Angus, in the new position, is reported to be receiving a salary of $25,000 a year.

Baby Mine

Jan Interprets the Mode

A Mandarin coat-negligee is lovely for fall! (A Dah-ray design).

WOULDST know our idea of the most thoroughly all-around practical evening coat? Meaning practical in the sense that one invests in it as much as one invests in a beautiful art object, knowing that changing tastes and styles will not detract one whit from its intrinsic beauty, and that times and tides will have very little effect on it.

Well, it is a mandarian coat. No other garment save the shawl can be compared to it—does it seem strange that both of them come from China? Oh yes, I know it is popularly supposed that shawls originated in Spain, but actually they were taken to Spain from China, and there adopted. But back to our mandarian coat!

The modern Haute Couture is given to tearing its sparse locks over the baffling simplicity of the cut of this interesting garment, unable to adequately explain its centuries upon centuries of continued beauty.

• • • •

The answer lies, of course, in the fabrics. Any costume of any country which does not change its dress ideas from year to year, is bound to show richness and beauty in its fabrics, just as any country that does make even an infrequent change is bound to be more cautious of lavishing beauty upon something foreordained to obscurity.

All of us can not have a handwoven mandarian jacket, delicately embroidered with the complete details of our ancestry. Therefore the wise couturier, upon finding a piece of fabric, which is of itself so lovely it can afford to be handled with rigid simplicity, offers us modern versions, which do not deviate one iota from the mandarian coat of China centuries ago.

And a wise woman spends a great deal of money on such a garment, realizing that it is a permanent investment rather than for one or two seasons.

That's our idea of the last word in a combination of beauty and practicability for an evening coat.

• • • •

And how simple to make! Any one can make a mandarian coat—if she will send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet we have just made for you, which tells you exactly how to do it. That's our promise and we stick to it—why not just for fun try it, if you have never ever sewed anything?

• • • •

Can you figure this out? But, word of honor, it was lovely! A frock of heavy brown tulle worn over a green silk foundation, showing a scarf-collar forming a deep V-shaped decolletage over a yellow gilet, which was covered by the tulle, and which also crossed at the front to form a high belt. And then a coat in a soft shade of green broadcloth, with a deep collar reaching to the hem of summer ermine and a quilted crepe de chine lining of brown.

• • • •

I just told you about this by way of proving to you how really terrible something real nice can sound.

• • • •

Clever Fingers Contest.

Now haven't you just been waiting for a contest like this? It's going to be such fun just to sit down and write about how to make something you've known so well how to make and always enjoyed making! Anything at all—that Clever Fingers can create. And, well, imagine the envy of your friends if they chance to see you in an ensemble or negligee, of Dah-ray design, made by her very own Paris couturier.

All letters must be typewritten, name and address on letter, drawings can be terrible, but must be clear.

• • • •

Tomorrow you should make it a point to look for the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Post. It has many nice ideas and suggestions.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"Virgo."

IF SEPTEMBER 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:15 a. m. to 10 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4:40 p. m., and from 10:30 p. m. to 11:50 p. m. The danger periods are from 6 a. m. to 8 a. m., and from 1 p. m. to 2:30 p. m.

The stars vaticinate a happy and successful period for this date. Peace and harmony will improve home conditions. No business disappointments are augured. Association with your "elders" may bring you good luck.

Children born on this September 21 will have an indomitable spirit, and will seldom admit defeat. They will be intellectual, far-sighted and resourceful. They will be affectionate and loyal to their home and friends.

You have an unselfish and a wholesome ambition, and though you strive to win, winning to you is not a grim obsession, something to be achieved by hook or crook. You are neither elated nor downcast by your luck in the big games of life and are ever cheerful under defeat. At home, in business, in play, and everywhere, you are always in the true sense a "sportsman." You would rather concede a doubtful point than take one. Not for you, the "win, tie or wrangle" attitude.

You have a sympathetic and kindly nature, and there are no ulterior motives behind your gracious words or generous deeds. You do not do things expecting a good turn in return; you are not afraid of being "done." You do not ask that wicked question, "Does he or she deserve it?" You are not disheartened when you are snubbed or your efforts are mistaken.

Your victories in life will not be won easily. Honors, elevation in life and general success will be gained after long periods of effort and determination. Fortunately you are not easily discouraged and are very persistent. Success or failure in anything is caused more by mental attitude than by mental capacities, and your mental attitude is an optimistic one. You recognize your talents, and you know how to use them. You are not ashamed to advertise your good points.

Successful people born on September 21:

Gideon F. Thayer—Educator.
Douglas Houghton—Physician and naturalist.
Abraham H. Cassel—Antiquarian.
Clark Howell—Journalist.
Samuel Rea—R. R. official.
H. L. Stimson—Secretary of State.

Uncle Ray's Corner

A Little Saturday Talk.

A SAD letter comes to me from a 10-year-old reader, Betty Stivers, and it contains this paragraph:

"I am going to try to write to you if there is enough of me left to do so. Part of me is up on the ranch in the road where the horse bucked me off—part of my hips, nose, lip, knee, forehead and hand are up there in the road."

Poor Betty! I'm sure she is speaking a little bit in play—for she was able to write a letter, and if very much of each part she mentioned had been left on the road, I doubt that she could have done so. However, I know Betty; she is a brave girl, and probably would not have mentioned the accident if she had not been bruised pretty badly.

Bucking bronchoes! For my part, I'm willing to let the cowboys have the honor of riding them!

Betty also told me about the loss of her new bicycle, and sent me a clipping from her local paper telling how it had been recovered.

Two boys—who had probably been reading "Diamond Dick" or cheap stories of that sort—decided to turn into robbers. They stole two bicycles, a lantern, a watch and a fountain pen during the course of several days.

Betty's father noticed that in the shed where the bicycles had been kept there was a heel-print, with four little squares near the center of it; and he kept the print carefully covered. When the boys were picked up by officers, it was found that one of them wore shoes with heels which made marks of just that sort.

Betty's wheel was somewhat battered when it came back to her; but I fancy that if she must choose between riding it or a broncho, she will choose the wheel!

It is mean to steal anything; and above all, it is mean to steal from a child. It has been said that "crime never pays." Certainly, when a person turns into a robber he robs himself. What does he lose? His self-respect; and sometimes he loses his chance to wander in the open air.

WORK ON BRIDGE

Bridge Brevities, a pamphlet by Milton C. Work, the World's pre-eminent authority on Auction and Contract Bridge, free.

This valuable pamphlet, containing concise suggestions for players of both games, will be sent with the compliments of this paper to readers of Mr. Work's articles who request it.

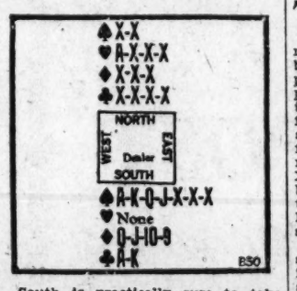
Requests must be addressed to Milton C. Work, care of this paper, and must include a stamped (2c stamp) self-addressed return envelope.

Read Mr. Work's articles on Auction and Contract. Every day exclusively in The Washington Post.

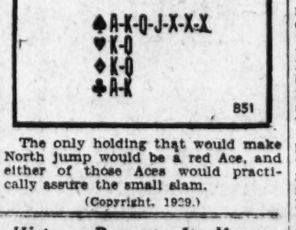
WHEN the original bidder has a terrifically strong suit hand, he frequently finds himself between the devil of slam temptation and the deep sea of fear of being set. With game a certainty, it may be that a little help from partner will produce a slam; but that should partner hold a bust the result will be neither game nor slam, but a penalty—should an original slam bid be made.

Under such circumstances a player is placed in a fortunate position when he has a score because, without going to an extreme, he can bid more than game and so ask his partner to go on if the partner have any strength whatever. If the score be as high as 70, a player who had slam thoughts at a major trump could give his partner accurate information by bidding two or three of his major—neither would be a bid for more than game; and the two-bid would call for a raise on two tricks, the three-bid, for a raise on one trick. However, it is rather rare for a player to have a terrifically strong suit hand and a score at the same time.

From a love score, a bid of five of either major commands the partner to jump to a slam if he has a trick; but occasionally such a bid, made with an eleven trick holding proves expensive. Suppose, for example, that the following two hands faced each other:



South is practically sure to take eleven tricks and it might seem as if one trick in partner's hand would produce slam; but one Heart trick would fail to do so in the example given, and South would be taking a chance in bidding five Spades with chicane in Hearts. He probably could make his five, but would fail to make six if North jumped with the Ace of Hearts. With the following hand, however, a bid of five would be perfectly safe:



The only holding that would make North jump would be a red Ace, and either of those Aces would practically assure the small slam.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

INHERITING CHARACTERISMS.

THERE is an increasing amount of evidence that acquired characteristics can be inherited, the new evidence relates to changes brought about by X-rays. The new proof seems to show that treating a pregnant animal with X-rays is likely to cause the young to be born deformed. Furthermore, the deformed animal is likely to transmit its deformity to its progeny. When pregnant guinea pigs are treated with X-rayss their young are frequently born with extra toes, web toes, or toes without webbing; with three legs, club foot, drawn leg, or with some other leg deformity.

Dr. Bagg, who has proved this, says the deformities are definitely inherited, and that in their inheritance they are recessive and follow the Mendelian law somewhat. That is a contribution to a controversy which has racked the world for centuries. Lamarck taught that acquired characteristics could be passed on from parent to offspring.

According to his theory the animal or the man was influenced by the surroundings, and these new qualities were inherited by succeeding generations. The Lamarckian theory was a matter about which the general run of people knew nothing and cared less until Darwin came along.

Darwin accepted most of the Lamarckian theory and piled up some evidence for it. He showed how the transmission was accomplished. This was called the survival of the fittest. It was the irony of fate that the observations of this retiring, peace loving, noncombative man precipitated a religious controversy which stirred the world and led to perpetual strife.

Weismann disagreed radically with both Lamarck and Darwin. He showed that acquired characteristics could not be inherited. The environment influenced the cells of the body at large. The cells of germination belonged in a different class. Nothing that affected the body could affect them. These cells alone were responsible for progeny. Therefore the new generation held to type, regardless of what may have happened to the old. The trend of the present time is away from the Weismann theories and toward those of Lamarck and Darwyn.

Studies such as this one by Bagg are very much that way.

CROSS EYES NEED TREATMENT.

Miss R. G. writes: I am a girl of 15 and am crosseyed. Sometimes my eyes are straight and at other times one eye goes off to the side. I have worn glasses but do not care to wear them any longer. Will operation help?

REPLY.

Have this attended to. Wearing glasess may correct the trouble. Operation may be required.

NETTLE RASH TREATMENT.

E. C. writes:

Two years ago when I was in a tuberculosis sanatorium I had an attack of nettle rash one evening. I scratched all night, until even my tongue itched. A friend happened to come the next day and told me to use a solution of half water and half vinegar. Applying this by patting with a piece of cheesecloth stopped the itching. But I ate some egg custard for dinner, and half an hour later the itching began again. The solution stopped it a second time.

I believe nettle rash must be caused from an acid condition of the system and that one needs to go light on proteins, fats and sugars for a few days after he is afflicted. Three-fourths of my food at the sanatorium was of acid-producing kinds.

I hope this will relieve the rash sufferers.

REPLY.

Probably you are sensitive to egg protein. Many people are.

IT WILL MAKE ONE FAT.

C. S. writes: Will under-secretion of the thyroid gland make one fat?

REPLY.

Yes.

YES. BE VACCINATED NOW.

L. E. R. writes:

1. I am 21 years old and have never been vaccinated. Is there any danger of getting smallpox?
2. Would it be necessary to be vaccinated now?
3. I have heard that only children get smallpox. Is that true?

REPLY.

1. Yes.
2. Yes. Have it done this fall.
3. No.

IT IS A GOOD FOOD.

R. P. writes:

1. Does a raw egg mixed with orange juice affect a person?
2. Is it too rich for the blood?
3. Will it help to put on weight? I am a male 22 years of age and I am about 20 pounds underweight.

REPLY.

1. It is a good food.
2. No.
3. It may. You should take plenty of milk, cereal, bread and fat in addition.

HOW TO STRENGTHEN HEART.

B. M. writes:

1. Is it all right for a girl with a heart murmur to marry?
2. Does this trouble wear off in later years? If not, can anything be done to strengthen the heart?

REPLY.

1. As a rule it is. Much depends on the state of compensation of the heart muscles.
2. A person with a heart murmur should get enough exercise to keep his muscles in good condition.

VALUE OF BULGARIAN BUTTERMILK.

E. L. M. writes: Do you consider Bulgarian buttermilk a perfect food? If so, what amount a day should an adult drink?

REPLY.

Bulgarian buttermilk is a good food. A perfect food is one that is attractive to the taste, is easily digested and assimilated, and that supplies every element needed to nourish and protect the body. Bulgarian buttermilk does not meet the specifications. No food does.

SEPTEMBER 21.

ONE of the best-known actresses before the American public for many years, Marie Burroughs, was born this day, 1866, in San Jose, Calif.

After completing her education in a convent, she was engaged at Madison Square Garden, with which she was identified for many years.

In 1889 Miss Burroughs went to England, where she played as the chief support of Francis Willard. In 1894 she toured America in Arthur Pinero's drama, "The Profligate." Later she produced "Romeo and Juliet" and "Leah."

The hit of the star's career was as Vashti in "Judah," remembered as an impersonation of great delicacy and tender, touching pathos.

BRISK SELLING ENDS NEW BULLISH DRIVE

Many Stocks Yield Sharply After Period of Erratic Trading.

OILS SCORE NEW LOWS

New York, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—A cloudburst of selling in radio broke over the stock market without warning, just as the speculative skies seemed to be clearing this afternoon, sharply depressing several of the leading industrials, and coming as a climax to an erratic and nerve-wrecking session of the stock market.

The market began the day rather confidently. Although the overnight announcement of an increase of $95,000,000 in brokers loans, coming on top of four successive weeks of sharp advances caused an undercurrent of uneasiness, bullishness prevailed in many quarters, and there was an inclination to explain it away by pointing to the several new listings which had to be financed during the week. Bears were able to launch a rather effective drive before noon, however, and no sooner had operators for the advance regained control of the price movement in the afternoon, than the break in radio threw the market into turmoil.

Call money renewed at 8 per cent and held at that figure all day, and bankers were inclined to regard the credit situation as fairly satisfactory.

Laid to Foreign Selling.

The week-end business and trade reviews reported no significant changes, either for the better or the worse. There was no news regarding radio or other stocks to account for the decline, and the cause of the break turned to brokerage houses with foreign connections. From them the heavy selling was found to be emanating.

Wall street was inclined, therefore, to attribute much of the day's difficulties to London, whence came reports that the Clarence Hatry investment banking interests were in serious difficulties. The Photomaton group of shares, backed by them, have lost some $50,000,000 in market value on the London market in the last two days, and speculative issues generally have been carried sharply lower.

There has been heavy buying of New York stocks of late for London account, and brokers said it was reasonable to suppose that the Photomaton debacle had precipitated a heavy unloading of shares here.

Converges on Few Favorites.

It was notable that selling on this market converged on a few of the recent favorites among the leading industrials, bulls managing to hold their ground in most of the utilities and sending several sharply higher. Rails sagged but moderately. The week-end business reviews pointed to good fall buying in the clothing lines and optimism regarding fall trade generally.

The heavy industries, especially steel and automobile, slackened up a little but greater activity is expected in October. Two of the first August railroad earnings to appear were those of the Erie and the Nickel Plate and disclosed substantial gains.

Radio was depressed 9 points, to 95, and closed at 96. More than 400,000 shares changed hands, accounting for about 8 per cent of the day's turnover of nearly 4,900,000 shares. National Cash Register, United States Steel, Westinghouse Electric, R. H. Macy, and General Electric were among issues losing from 4 to 7 points.

Oils at Year's New Lows.

In the oils, such recent leaders as Royal Dutch and Standard of New Jersey lost 2 or 3 points, and Mexican Seaboard reached a new low for the year. In the motors, Chrysler sagged more than 2 points to a new 1929 low at 64¾. Wide drops were 11 points in Allied Chemical and 17 in Otis Elevator.

Columbia Gas and Electric was a strong spot, rising more than 11 points to a record price. American and Foreign Power was sent up more than 8 points to a new record level, and such issues as Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey and Standard Gas were firm.

Two of the investment trusts, American International and Sterling Securities, rose to record heights on reports of marked appreciation of their holdings. A few industrial specialties jumped into new high ground, including Beatrice Creamery, Burroughs Adding, Foster Wheeler and Worthington Pump.

Grains Continue to Sag.

In the commodities, grains continued to sag. Wheat futures lost more than a cent a bushel on reports of beneficial rains in Australia and large Northwest stocks. Corn lost nearly as much on bearish Illinois crop reports. Cotton sold up rapidly on bullish crop advices, but reacted and closed but a little higher.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. Sterling continued to sag. The cable rate, while ruling at $4.84⅝, slipped a shade below that level for a time, recording a new 1929 low. The Canadian dollar was at a discount of nearly 1 cent. The Japanese yen continued to mount, however, reaching 47.80 cents.

BATEAU WINS BY NOSE IN OPENING GRAW FEATURE

Goslin Gives Browns 1-0 Victory

Blue Scores From 3d Base After Daring "Goose" to Throw.

Play Costly to Nats; Duel With Thomas Won by Crowder.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

PROVING the truth in the saying that "boys will be boys," Outfielder Goose Goslin and First Baseman Lu Blue staged a prank in the fifth inning yesterday which ruined a pretty pitching duel between "General" Alvin Crowder and Myles Thomas and gave the Browns a 1-to-0 victory over the Nationals. That the loss, which snapped the natives' winning streak at five in a row, did not narrow the fifth-place margin which Washington holds over the Tigers is due to the fact that Bucky Harris' gang also was beaten, bowing to the Athletics in a ten-inning battle.

The Goslin-Blue act was staged as the Washington left fielder was turning in the second out of the inning. Blue had led off with a double and advance to third on McNeely's neat suicide. Manush then lofted weakly to left and the Goose came in fast for the catch. Blue had no intention of trying to score after it, but he gradually sneaked off the base, daring Goslin to throw. When the latter finally did, the runner dashed for home and easily reached there when the throw, made to Hayes at third, was bad. Had Goslin returned the ball to the infield in the usual manner, the two teams might have battled until dark.

No Two Washington Hits In Same Inning.

Both pitchers were in great form and each allowed but five hits. No two obtained by the Nationals came in the same inning, while Thomas, who allowed two in the fourth, pulled out of this hole in fine style.

Although the flingers were in command at all times, due to the fact that each walked four, while two errors were charged to Kress, visiting shortstop, there was base action by one side or the other in practically every one of the first six frames.

In the first, Blue led off with a single and, after the next two were retired, Thomas packed the aisles by walking both McGowan and Kress. This put it up to O'Rourke, but he failed. A useless pass came in the alien third and then Howley's men made another bid, Kress and O'Rourke singling in succession to open round 4. A nice play by Judge forced O'Rourke midway on Melillo's roller, Kress taking third. Manion's best was a roller to Thomas on which Kress was trapped and run down between third and home and fans breathed a sigh of relief when Cronin ended the inning by taking Crowder's foul back of third.

Browns Have Last Chance In Ninth.

After being given their run in the fifth, the Browns were set down in order until the ninth when, with two down, Melillo singled and Manion walked. Again it was put up to Crowder and again he went out in pitcher-like fashion.

While all this was going on, the Nats were making mild bids here and there, several of which would have been productive with but one more hit—and Crowder saw to it that this was not forthcoming. Washington's three best opportunities came in the third, fifth and sixth.

With one on the shelf in round 3, Kress gave Judge life on the first

Grimm, Cub Captain, Due Back in Game Within Week

McCarthy May Take Trip East to Scout Athletics; Regulars to Rest in Cincinnati Series; Giants to Be Met Today.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Joe McCarthy's pennant-winning Cubs will resume their grind against the Giants tomorrow after a day of rest, with the cheering news that Charley Grimm, their field captain, will be back in the line-up within a week.

Grimm, who has been out of the game as the result of a fractured bone in his left hand, will be able to return to the job of first basing by the time the Cubs engage Cincinnati a week from tomorrow in a six-game series. Grimm's throwing hand is loosening up nicely, but his physician today ordered him to rest it until Monday. Then he may cut loose.

Tolson has performed creditably in his efforts to fill Grimm's shoes, but Manager McCarthy is convinced Grimm's return to the lineup will greatly strengthen the club. McCarthy says no major league first baseman can eclipse Grimm in defensive play.

This was an off day in the schedule for both the Cubs and Giants. The Cubs indulged in some high-class loafing, storing up energy for next week, when McCarthy plans to send them through customary drills even though they have five idle days as far as major league competition is concerned.

McCarthy may take a dash eastward next week for a personal inspection of the victorious Athletics. Several of his veterans may accompany him for a first-hand look at the American League champions.

In the final six games against the Cincinnati Reds, most of the regulars will be given a rest, with the exception of Hornsby and Hack Wilson. They intend to remain in the game, if for no other reason than to continue their pursuit of National League batting honors.

Few Scattered Games Usher In 1929 Grid Season Today

WHEN dear old Marion Institute met Howard at Marion, Ala., yesterday (result unknown), our big fall sport of bruising bones to place an inflated oval pigskin behind a couple of posts actually started in Chapter 1929.

No burning telegraph wires have been reported as the aftermath of the struggle between Marion and Howard despite the fact they had the honor of appearing at the rise of the curtain. There may be a spark or two seen today, however, as approximately 25 games between teams throughout the country are scheduled to be played. While most of these teams hold minor ranking, there are several involved which may cut up and carry on and make this early season opening one to be remembered by the historians.

Upsets Are in Order For the Day.

Perhaps it would be better to say that the opponents of these important elevens may perform the memorable in the way of surprise victories. West Virginia Wesleyan has a chance to defeat its time honored rival, West Virginia, which annually holds a respected ranking, while the same holds true for West Coast Army, which plays Stanford. Denton, which meets Southern Methodist, and Hampden-Sidney, which tackles Virginia Military Institute. Of course, the chances for upsets in these games are small, and we probably will have to wait until next week, when the season will be on in full blast.

Poor Washington, as usual a stepchild in the eyes of the schedule fathers, is deprived of an early football opener. Not until next Saturday will fans of the Capital glimpse the athletes fighting for alma mater and possession of the ball.

Day's Excitement, if Any, In the South.

The excitement, if any, in today's clashes centers in the South where eight games are listed, the nearest of which is the V. M. I.-Hampden-Sidney game at Lexington, Va. The Clemson Tigers, who are regarded highly around the Southern Conference, will take on Newberry College at Clemson, S. C., and the Erskine Seceders and the Purple Hurricane of Furman University tussle at Greenville, S. C., in games bearing on the State title. Wake Forest opens against Catawba at Wake Forest, N. C.; the Chattanooga Moccasins take on Murphreesboro at Chattanooga; the strong Loyola eleven plays St. Edwards in New Orleans; Transylvania goes against Cedarville of Ohio at Lexington, Ky., and the Davidson Wildcats play Elon College at Davidson, N. C.

Georgetown, Pennsylvania, Yale, Harvard, Princeton, New York U., Boston College, Dartmouth, Cornell, Columbia and other big elevens of the East, and Western Conference members and Notre Dame of the Middle West will await next Saturday or the one following for their opening games.

Following is the list of today's games:

Adrian vs. Detroit Tech, at Adrian, Mich.; Baylor vs. Austin, at Waco, Tex.; Bluffton vs. Ohio Northern, at Bluffton, Ohio; Clarkson vs. Alfred, at Potsdam, N. Y.; Clemson vs. Newberry, at Clemson, S. C.; Daniel Baker vs. St. Mary, at Brownwood, Tex.; Davidson vs. Elon, at Davidson, N. C.

Lamar Walks Out on Add Warren

Manager Leaves With Boxer When Cash Is Not Posted.

Proctor, D.C. Fighter, Earns Draw in Semifinal Bout.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Sept. 20. The scheduled ten-round boxing match between Addison Warren and Henry Lamar, the feature event of an exhibition put on here tonight by the Charlottesville Athletic Club, Inc., and sponsored by the local post, American Legion, did not materialize.

Lamar's manager refused to let his man enter the ring until the cash guarantee was forthcoming. Announcement was made from the ring by an officer of the legion that Lamar's manager refused to accept the checks given by University of Virginia students for tickets as cash. This statement was promptly denied by a brother of Lamar's, a former student at Duke University. "Lamar stands on his rights," he declared, "when the promoters failed to live up to their contract."

Lamar left the fair grounds in a car at 11 o'clock and soon thereafter Addison Warren entered the ring accompanied by his manager. The former Carolina star was given a big hand by the crowd. It was stated that he was ready to go ahead with the fight.

Rumored That Lamar Might Return.

In the meanwhile word was passed around that an effort would be made to get Lamar to return to the fair grounds, but at 11:30 o'clock he had not put in an appearance.

Three preliminary bouts were pulled off, Jack Snyder, of Alexandria, Va., and Frank D'Angelo, of Washington, met in a four-round match. Referee Charlie Short, of Baltimore, gave the decision to D'Angelo.

In the middleweight event "Knockout" Riley, of Harrisonburg, Va., was awarded the decision over George Grove, of Washington, D. C., in a lively bout.

The semifinal proved the best bout on the card. Joe Proctor, of Washington, and Cammy "Fireman" Griffin, of Richmond, Va., went six rounds to a draw. The Richmonder had the better of the fight in the early rounds, but Proctor came back strong at the finish with effective body blows that slowed up his opponent.

Seven Ex-College Stars Sign With Giant Pros

New York, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Saul Mielziner, star guard of Carnegie Tech's football team last season, has signed to play with the New York professional football Giants this year. Other new linesmen who have joined the Giants include Dan McMullin and Joe Wostoupal, from Nebraska; George Lyon, from Kansas; Leonard Dykman, from Utah; Bob Howard, from Marietta, and Wilburn Capps, from East Central College.

Two Brother Nines Plan "World Series"

Hawk Springs, Wyo., Sept. 20 (A.P.). Two baseball teams composed entirely of brothers are to play a world series of their own, starting tomorrow. One team is the Mariatt Brothers, of Hawk Springs, and the other is the Stanzak Brothers, of Waukegan, Ill.

Hawk Springs will be the scene of the first two games and the other two will be played in Waukegan September 28 and 29. If they break even in the four games the teams will then meet on a neutral diamond to decide the world brothers title.

The Mariatts, who represent Hawk Springs in the North Platte Valley League, range from 19 to 45 years of age. The youngest Stanzak brother is 15 and the oldest 33.

BOWLERS TO MEET.

The Prince Georges County men's and women's duckpin organizations will hold their final meetings tonight at 40 Spencer street. Both seasons will start Monday. An additional team is sought for the women's circuit.

Spitzer Lauded as Term Of A. A. U. Office Ends

In view of the imminent organization of the Washington Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, the office of commissioner for the District of Columbia representing the South Atlantic Association, hitherto controlling Washington amateur athletics, has been made vacant, it was announced last night by Joseph T. England, president of the South Atlantic Association. Ernest J. Spitzer, one of the leading figures in the organization of the Washington association, held the commissionership.

In declaring the office vacant, England said that the South Atlantic Association did not wish to intrude itself upon the affairs of the new Capital chapter, and added laudatory comment on Spitzer's conduct of the commissionership as follows: Mr. Spitzer and Mr. Spitzer's work as commissioner has been highly satisfactory and he has acquitted himself with great zeal and ability and with credit and honor to our association."

Filipino Net Tourney Reaches Final Stage

Finals in the doubles tournament of the Filipino Club members will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the Monument courts. Manuel G. Zamora and Mauro Baradi will meet Andy Flores and Urbano Zafra to determine the doubles champions. The former team reached the title round by defeating Silva and Rillon, 6—2, 4—6, 6—2, while the latter team won from Carballo and Piniera, 6—4, 2—6, 6—2.

The singles finals will be played tomorrow afternoon at the same time when Zamora meets Carballo. In the semifinals Zamora defeated Rillon, 6—4, 6—1, and Carballo disposed of Piniera, 6—3, 6—0.

Bucs Tighten Hold On 2d; Down Braves

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Pittsburgh defeated Boston, 10-3, thereby giving the Pirates a tighter grip on second place in the senior circuit.

Peery, who started for the Braves, was forced from the game in the sixth when a batted ball badly injured his left hand. Touchstone, Providence rookie, finished.

Pittsburgh put the game on ice in the sixth, scoring six runs with the aid of Lloyd Waner, who hit for the circuit with two on. Bell batted out a homer for Boston.

JONES FACES ST. LOUIS TODAY

Howley Praises Work of Earl McNeely and Coffman.

MANAGER Dan Howley and his Browns will end their schedule here this afternoon with both teams battling for the series edge, as they broke even in the other two games played in this set. Walter Stewart, southpaw, who was expected to start ere this, is due to get the alien pitching assignment, according to the St. Louis manager, while "Sad Sam" Jones, former Brownie, will try to give the Nats another victory over his former mates.

Pitcher Myles Thomas had a wild spell after two were out in the Browns' first yesterday and delivered eight successive balls. The first two ended in a pass for McGowan, Kress walked on four straight, and two were called on O'Rourke before the batter finally took a strike. Then he lofted to Goslin to end the round with the bases full.

If Dan Howley remains as St. Louis manager next year, Earl McNeely, former National, certainly is sure of a regular job. "I rate McNeely as one of the greatest outfielders in the game," said the Brown leader in a gabfest before yesterday's contest, "and if he could hit consistently around the .300 mark, he'd be just about as good as any flychaser in the game.

Howley Praises Work Of Coffman.

Howley also handed a verbal boquet to Pitcher Dick Coffman, who, with McNeely, went to St. Louis in the deal which brought Pitcher Milton Gaston here during the off-season of 1927-28. "He's only a kid yet, but he'll be a real pitcher in a year or so. I have shifted him from overheads so that he now has a side-arm delivery, and the change has made him 100 per cent better. I think he'll be heard from next season."

Gordon Phelps, an amateur catcher, who has been performing with the "Gamblers," of Odenton, Md., worked out with the Nationals before yesterday's game. He has the required heft, but showed little else in the way of big-league qualifications.

Catcher Bennie Tate narrowly escaped injury in the third inning of yesterday's game, when he raced all the way into the Nats' dugout, while chasing a foul off Manush's bat. The little receiver collided with one of the concrete posts supporting the roof, but glanced off it, and, fortunately, did not hurt himself.

1,000 Guineas Golf Event to Mitchell

Wentworth, England, Sept. 20 (A.P.). Abe Mitchell, noted British golfer, won the 1,000 guineas professional championship today, defeating P. H. Rodgers, of St. Annes Old Club, by the big margin of 8 and 7 in the 36 holes final.

The victory carries with it the professional match play championship.

20,000 Watch Man o' War Filly Win

Bobashela Defeated in Last Stride in Autumn Handicap.

Princess Tina Runs Close Third in Driving Finish.

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH.
(Sports Editor of The Post).

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 20. Twenty thousand race-goers greeted the return of thoroughbreds to Maryland's major tracks today and here on the scene of many of her famous daddy's triumphs, the Man o' War filly, Bateau, owned by Mrs. W. M. Jeffords, took down the $2,500 Autumn Handicap purse, the crowning contest of a day of splendid racing.

Emerging from the pack midway down the stretch run, Bateau ran down his opposition under an energetic ride by Eddie Ambrose and won his race in the final stride, beating Bobashela for the major portion of the purse by a scant nose with Princess Tina, the latter's stable-mate, another neck back in the blanket finish. J. Livingston's seasoned campaigner, Recreation, was fourth, beaten only two lengths by the three leaders.

Bateau traversed the mile and 70 yards route in the creditable time of 1:43 4-5.

Bateau was slow to find her speed under the top impost of 116 pounds and after a perfect break, Black Diamond flattered his backers by setting the pace for the first half mile, with Bobashela and Martinique next in pursuit and the remainder of the field closely bunched with the exception of Recreation, which sulked at the start and was virtually left at the post.

Ambrose Outrides Russell To Gain Verdict.

Before the far turn had been reached, Black Diamond had wilted and Martinique and Bobashela assumed the lead as the field turned in to the home stretch, with Princess Tina closest in attendance and Bateau fifth, apparently beaten.

Then it was that the Man o' War filly responded to Ambrose's urging with fine courage and coming through tight quarters, ran down Martinique and set out for the leading Audley entry. Ambrose outrode Russell on Bobashela in the closing strides in a short duel with the Jeffords filly gaining the decision by a bare nod and Princess Tina only a neck behind her running mate.

Celebrating his debut on Maryland's mile tracks after a sensation campaign around the half-mile circuit, Jockey F. Smoek outrode Sonny Workman and C. Pronk in a driving finish to score with R. L. Freeman's John P. Grier colt Audax in the race for 2-year-old maidens that opened the program.

Never worse than second, Audax trailed Calome around the turn into the stretch, with Skirl always in close attendance. The race was among these three virtually from the start, with Audax picking up the pace-setter a furlong out and showing gameness in the final yards to stall off the determined bid of Workman and Skirl, which came up on the outside in a belted rush to finish a nose behind the winner and beat Calome by a nose. Eternardo, an early threat, was fourth, five lengths farther back.

Maryland's major race campaign opened with a distinct upset in the victory of Audax, which was lightly regarded in the mutuels and returned a price of $59 to $2.

Lady Marie Defeats Port Harlem.

The good mare Lady Marie, from the E. R. Morehouse stable, won the second race in convicing fashion over the 6-furlong route, beating Port Harlem, the favorite, by a half length, with Sublevado another length and a half back.

The running developed into a four-horse battle, with Bucky Harris next closest throughout. Lady Marie was off in the lead, avoiding interference among the big field, with Sublevado and Port Harlem next in line. This position continued until the turn, when Brice sent Port Harlem up, passing Sublevado, but the McLean colt was never able to get to the winner, cleverly ridden by R. Cannon.

The Harry Payne Whitney string, under the direction of Preddy Hopkins, scored in the third race when Flimsy, the Broomstick filly, outran

$20,000 POTOMAC TEST FOR 3-YEAR-OLDS TODAY

Camden Filly Favored to Score

Rose of Sharon Faces Promising Group in Feature.

Track Records Are in Danger; Course Is Lightning Fast.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 20 With the Potomac Handicap, an exacting test of thoroughbred stamina and courage over a mile and a sixteenth of ground, serving as the piece de resistance of a well-balanced and well-filled card, the offering at picturesque Havre de Grace, this afternoon promises to attract a crowd that will tax the capacity of the spacious grandstand and enclosure of the Harford Agricultural and Breeders Association.

Carrying an added value of $20,000, this first big prize of the up-State track's current meeting—is fashioned for 3-year-olds and will savor of an intersectional flavor, for it has drawn from the West none other than former Senator Johnson N. Camden's redoubtable, distance running filly, Rose of Sharon, pronounced by students of the sport as being a worthy successor to the Audley Farm's Princess Doreen, Fred Musante's My Dear and other queens of the turf of an almost forgotten day.

Rose of Sharon Faces Fleet-Footed Field.

Measuring strides and endurance with the fleet-footed thoroughbred miss from Kentucky will be the Warm Stable's The Nut, Harry Payne Whitney's Beacon Hill, Samuel Ross' Grey Coat, Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Aquastella, the Keeneland Stud's Jean Valjean, Walter J. Salmon's Preakness winner, Dr. Freeland, and a baker's dozen of others. It is a worthy field that has been named overnight for the feature.

Antepost favoritism leans to the prepossessing daughter of Light Brigade, although The Nut, Beacon Hill, Grey Coat and any number of the others that will make up the field will not be lacking in support. However, a victory for Rose of Sharon would prove a most popular one, if for sentimental reasons only.

Supporting the Potomac as the secondary feature will be the September and North Brook handicaps. Rounding out the card are four other events that give every promise of a highly entertaining afternoon of sport. With clear weather and a fast track prevailing, track records are in imminent danger of being shattered.

935	Jack Adams (Randella)	105
925	Tricky Pal (Robertson)	110
925	St. Tuscan (Renick)	105

PARNELL BOUND is gifted with a high flight of early speed and his No. 3 post position should serve him well when Starter Milton lifts the latch. The five and one-half furlongs of this number should be more to his liking than three quarters as he has shown an inclination to call it a day after passing the five-eighths pole. DORITA is of the improving kind and a race to her last outing at Saratoga would find her furnishing the contention. ZEVESGOLD should experience little trouble in accounting for some portion of the purse.

Second race—Two-year-olds. Six furlongs.

Hndcp.		Wgt.
981	Prometheus (Workman)	110
969	Zeal (Catrone)	108
967	Chimney Sweep (Ambrose)	105

962	Col. Crump (Malley)	105
961	Mucker (Mann)	105
961	Myopia (Fields)	102

PROMETHEUS figures much the best of those entered in the six furlongs of this event, although the word is out that Preston Burch has a rather likely looking youngster in MUCKER. However, the cold dope points to the Harry Payne Whitney entrant and he shapes up as the most solid hazard of the day. ZEAL has displayed a tendency to fold up after negotiating five-eighths, while CHIMNEY SWEEP has just enough class to insure him of third portion of the spoils. The others have uncorked nothing which would warrant their being given serious consideration.

Third race—Three-year-olds and upward. Six furlongs.

Hndcp.		Wgt.
971	Neddie (Huff)	122
968	Toki (Smock)	114

955	Too High (O'Donnell)	105
954	Too High (Hebert)	110
952	My Sis (Beishak)	115

NEDDIE is the class of the opposition he is asked to measure strides with in this number. While the son of Colin is giving away lumps of poundage to everything else in the race, if anywhere near right, he should buck-jump from flag rise to flag fall. TOKI has shown splendid form in morning trials and upon her one appearance at Cumberland. Taking a line through her last race the Donnaconna filly may be the one to beat. Off some races MEI FOO might prove troublesome, but the Rancocas entrant will have to show highly improved form to much more than bother the top one.

Fourth race—Potomac Handicap; Three-year-olds. Mile and one-sixteenth.

Hndcp.		Wgt.
981	Rose of Sharon (Allen)	119
977	The Nut (M. Garner)	120

† Salubria Stable entry—Rose entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AUDAX, $59.00, $21.00, $9.30; SKIRL, $3.50, $2.80; CALOME, $13.50.

AUDAX, off forwardly and in close pursuit of the pace, responded with courage when called on to wear down the tiring STARBORN. He just managed to last long enough to stall off SKIRL. Latter broke rather slowly and worked his way on outside of leaders. He closed with a great burst of speed and was going much the fastest at end. Would have won in another stride. STARBORN hung after making a desperate effort inside furlong pole. ETONARDO and CALOME, rapid breakers, showed lot of foot in early stages and raced each other into exhaustion. BATTLING ON, bumped directly after the break, was eased up. JOE TEDDY stumbled and lost rider right after the start.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:47. Off at 2:51. Winner, E. R. Moorehouse's b. m (5), by Trompe La Mort—L. Orpheline. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $950; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46 3-5, 1:12 4-5.

* Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY MARIE, $16.40, $7.30, $3.70; PORT HARLEM, $4.70, $2.90; SUBLEVADO, $3.30.

LADY MARIE raced in close company with SUBLEVADO until rounding the far turn, where she went to the front, hung on with good courage in final drive. PORT HARLEM, off slowly, worked her way up on inside on back stretch, but came around leaders in stretch turn. She closed going fast and was gradually wearing the winner down. SUBLEVADO broke rapidly, showed a lot of early speed, but tired. BUCKY HARRIS should improve off this race. He looks in good condition. CORPORAL and AUCILLA broke slow and were not hurried.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,400. The Vogue. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:22. Off at 3:25. Winner, H. P. Whitney's br. f. (2), by Broomstick—Yankee Maid. Trained by F. Hopkins. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $225; third, $125; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47 1-5, 1:07 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLIMSY, $10.90, $3.70, $4.20; KHARA, $3.60, $3.00; SNOOZE, $4.20.

FLIMSY was rated off the early pace and when Workman made his move, he went up on the outside, escaping interference. FLIMSY responded with energy when called on, but was driving hard at the end to stall off KHARA'S rush. KHARA broke good, but immediately dropped back. She was slow to find her foot, then finished like a real good filly. Was going much the fastest at the end and would have won in a few more strides. SNOOZE weakened right at the end. GOOD AS GOLD was in between the Whitney pair entering the home stretch and appeared to be bumped. She was tiring fast in early stages and raced each other into exhaustion. BATTLING ON, bumped directly after the break, was eased up. JOE TEDDY stumbled and lost rider right after the start.

FOURTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $1,400. The Red Arrow. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:51. Off at 3:52. Winner, Xalapa Farm's b. f. (3), by Ballot—Julia II. Trained by W. M. Wallace. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $225; third, $125; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:45 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOLASSES JANE, $30.30, $10.30, $4.10; FRIAR CLIFF, $2.80, $4.10; PASSING BY, $2.80.

MOLASSES JANE, rated under restraint, trailed the leaders until just before making the turn into the home stretch, where she went to the front, hung on well when the real test came and outlasted FRIAR CLIFF in final drive. FRIAR CLIFF, well in hand first half mile, moved up on the outside with a rush at stretch turn, but hung under punishment last furlong. PASSING BY had a rough passage, ran impressively, and is well worth remembering. BLADE was shut off going to first turn.

FIFTH RACE—Mile and seventy yards. Purse, $2,500. The Autumn Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:23. Off at 4:24. Winner, W. M. Jeffords' b. f. (4), by Man o' War—Escuina. Trained by E. S. Herlan. Value to winner, $1,800; second, $400; third, $200; fourth, $100. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 1-5, 1:39, 1:43 4-5.

† Audley Farm-J. Livingston entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATEAU, $5.10, $3.20, $3.20; BOBASHELA, $2.40, $2.40; PRINCESS TINA, $2.40.

BATEAU, in close quarters most of the trip, finally found an opening after being straightened out in the home stretch and, responding with a courageous effort, wore BOBASHELA down to get up the final stride. BOBASHELA raced on the outside of leaders first seven furlongs. He hung right at the end after drawing away at furlong pole. PRINCESS TINA, well handled, met with no mishaps. RECREATION sulked in early stages and left the gate very slow. BLACK DIAMOND and MARTINIQUE raced each other into exhaustion making the pace.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:56. Off at 5:00. Winner, H. Garth's b. h. (6), by Hourless—Duchess Kathleen. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $950; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:47 2-5.

* Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REJUVENATION, $15.30, $7.20, $6.70; GOLDEN ARROW, $5.60, $4.10; JANE RINEHART, $17.20.

REJUVENATION began slowly, but gradually improved his position, saved ground entering the home stretch and fought it out with GOLDEN ARROW all the last furlong. GOLDEN ARROW, forced to go around on outside entering the home stretch, lost ground. He made a determined effort at furlong pole, where he took the lead, but hung right at the end. JANE RINEHART had a lot taken out of her racing ONE CENT into submission.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:37. Winner, P. J. Miles' br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ATOI, $10.20, $5.30, $3.70; TOPSY S., $4.00, $2.80; INTREPID, $3.50.

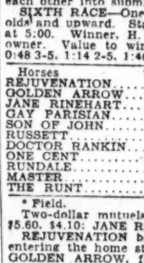
ATOI gradually improved her position and moved up stoutly when called on in stretch run, wore down the tiring TOPSY S. last furlong and was going away at end. TOPSY S. broke rapidly and showed a lot of early foot, stood off several challenges from BATTLE SHOT, but hung in final drive. INTREPID, shuffled back soon after the break, closed a big gap and finished strong. RING ON raced on the outside the entire trip.



COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT F. COLLYER

DICK O'HARA. Never heard of him, didja? Well, for your private info this is one of the fastest 2-year-olds at Lincoln Fields, makes his first start out there in the second spasm and, unless I am sorely mistaken, will be on the Bill Daily end throughout. Most recent private trial was 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 0:59 and the six furlongs in 1:13. Bo, you have the answer to that kind of gab in your lily white duke. FLYING AMBASSADOR has also worked well, finishing third in his most recent starts. He looks like the logical favorite with FLYING EXPRESS and the LEMA ENTRY right bang up. Pretty tight fit in the fourth between BROWN WISDOM and CHICLEIGHT. The latter is taking up three pounds today, but he gave the Reichert horse more than that—in a beating—a few days ago.

In the closing spasm the old commission horse is none other than the consistent KADIAK. He should be able to make the gang happy—over Sunday. Yea, bo, on the old beezer. Ye wekkum.

Down at Havre de Grace, the $20,000 Potomac has attracted eighteen of the best handicap horses in training. ROSE OF SHARON, the pride of the West, is asked to pick up her package in 119 pounds—top weight according to the scale—and one posted more than THE NUT which is given 120.

HUFTY, POPHAM, THACKER, SHOREY GOLF WINNERS

Bannockburn Semifinals Reached

Pedgergast Is Among Defeated Group in Fall Tourney.

John Shorey Winner Over Baggett and J. J. Lynch.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

PAGE HUFTY, Congressional, paired against Lieut. Comdr. W. S. Popham, Naval Academy, and John W. Thacker, Bannockburn, whose opponent is John C. Shorey, of the same club, are the survivors who will play the semifinal round this morning in the championship flight of the Bannockburn Club invitation golf tournament.

The contests by which the semifinalists reached their advantageous positions were by no means one-sided. In the morning round C. S. Runswick defeated his fellow club-member, M. F. McCarthy, on the eighteenth green, but lost in the afternoon by a wider margin, 3 and 2, to Hufty. Erwin P. Hair, Washington, won his morning match against John W. Owens, Columbia, also on the home green, but lost to Commander Popham in the afternoon, although he carried his opponent to the nineteenth hole. John R. Miller, Beaver Dam, won a 19-hole struggle in the morning against Leo F. Pass, Bannockburn, and then was eliminated by Thacker in the second round on the final green. Shorey had an easier journey to the semifinals, for he defeated J. F. Baggett, Beaver Dam, 4 and 3, in the morning, and J. J Lynch, Argyle, in the afternoon, 6 and 5.

Day Marked by Extended Struggles.

The day was marked by several extended struggles, some of which presented unique features. For instance, in the consolation flight of the first sixteen, Leo F. Pass and William L. Pendergast, both former champions of the Bannockburn Club, had a nip-and-tuck battle to the twenty-first hole, when Pass won because Pendergast's putt knocked Pass' ball into the cup. W. M. Kochenderfer, of the Columbia Club, had a hard-luck experience, for in his match against R. M. Stockman, Bannockburn, he was 4 up and 4 to play, needing only a half on any one of the last four holes to win As a matter of fact, he lost all four and then was defeated when he took three putts on the nineteenth green.

In the match between Dr. T. J. W. Brown, Bannockburn, and Larry Connors, Argyle, the pair were all even on the seventeenth tee and Connors seemed certain to be dormie 1 when the tee shot landed his ball on the green, 15 feet from the cup, while Dr. Brown's drive carried the ball far up the hill to the right of the green and in the rough. Brown, however, pitched close to the cup and holed a 4-foot putt for a par 3, while Connors took three putts and lost the hole. Eventually Brown won on the twentieth hole.

Billiard Wins 20-Hole Match.

George C. Billard, Bannockburn, also had a 20-hole match against A. J. Hendley, of the same club, surviving to win by virtue of a 20-foot putt on the eighteenth green and holing out on the nineteenth for a half, when his opponent's ball was only a few inches from the cup. His struggle came to naught, for he was eliminated in the afternoon round.

Of the semifinalists, Hufty and Shorey have figured prominently in local golf events. Commander Popham, although well-known in Navy circles as a low handicap golfer, is a newcomer in local competitions, while Thacker is a junior member of the Bannockburn Club who has never before qualified in a championship flight.

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime—By H. W. Webster

1928 Tiger Captain Helps Coach Eleven

Special to The Washington Post.

Hampden-Sidney, Va., Sept. 20.—"Speck" Worden, captain of last year's Tiger eleven now coaching the line for Drexel Institute has skipped the Dragon camp for a few days and returned to Death Valley assisting Coach Charlie Bernier and Red Smith in brushing up the Hampden-Sydney lands for their scrap tomorrow when they open the Old Dominion grid season with the Cadets at Lexington.

One can not tell yet what to expect of Bennier's products for 1929, as there are a number of sophomores on the squad. All the 24 men leaving today expect to see service in the game. Before making offhand predictions fans had better look up last year's record when the Garnet and Gray was overwhelmed by reserves, 14-7, after giving the Cadets a good scare and a tough battle.

ALEXANDRIA SPORTS

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 20.—The Alexandria High School Football Team left tonight for Newport News, to play their opening game of the season tomorrow against the Newport News High, State champions last year in section A, for high schools with over 1,000 students.

Coach Reynolds is impressed with the speed and pep Jennifer is displaying in the back field. Carr, a substitute last year, gives promise of being a star at tackle.

Alexandria golfers will drive off tomorrow in the qualification round for play in the Belle Haven Bowl tournament. Sixteen players will qualify, and match play will be started on Sunday. The Belle Haven Reaity Corporation has donated a prize of a dozen golf balls to be divided between the player with the lowest net score in tomorrow's play and the runner-up.

Sam Hildreth, Veteran Trainer, Seriously Ill

New York, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Sam Hildreth, noted trainer of Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas Stable, was taken today to Fifth Avenue Hospital and was reported in a serious condition from a stomach ailment.

He was removed to the hospital from his home at Stromboli Farm, near Jobstown, N. J. Hospital authorities refused to permit any one to see him.

The master handler of horses has been suffering for more than a year, but stuck to his duties until early in August at Saratoga Springs. About that time he was stricken with what was diagnosed as acute indigestion. Before the meeting closed he left for his farm, where he improved for a time only to have a setback three days ago.

Hildreth is considered to have few if any equals in the development and training of horses. He trained Zev which beat Papyrus, English Derby winner, in 1923; Fitz Herbert Novelty, winner of the Futurity in 1910; Stromboli, after which he named his farm; Friar Rock, Grey Lag, Mad Hatter, Kai Sang, Mad Play, Silver Fox and only this season Mokatam and Grattan.

MOUND DUEL IS LOST BY THOMAS

of the two errors charged against his record. Rice immediately singled the runner to second. On Goslin's tap to Melillo, Judge took third while Rice was being forced at the middle station, but Myer could do nothing to help matters.

In the fifth, the Nats managed to get a man to within a few feet of the plate from the third base side. Again with one away, Kress bobbled, this time putting Thomas on the bases. He went to third on Judge's single and a walk to Rice filled the sacks. With two chances to score, Goslin and Myer again failed, the pitcher being forced at the plate on Goslin's roller to Blue.

Crowder Falters Slightly In Round Six.

Crowder faltered slightly in the sixth, walking West and Cronin after Spencer had sacrificed the first named along. This time Hayes and Thomas found their bats just so much excess baggage and Crowder then hit his stride again and set the Nats down as fast as they came to the tee over the balance of the route.

Blue, with two hits, including his double, which was the only extra base blow of the game, led the mild allen attack, while Same Rice was credited with two of the home singles. Probably the best fielding play of the game was Hayes' stop of Kress' hard hit bounder opening the visitors' ninth.

Red Sox Rally Short And Indians Win, 4-2

Boston, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Wesley Ferrell, Cleveland pitcher, stopped a Red Sox rally in the eighth inning today and the Indians evened the series by taking the second game, 4 to 2. Ferrell went to the relief of Holloway. The Sox outhit the visitors by 13 hits to 9, but had 12 men left on bases.

Dobens, former Holy Cross pitcher, went to MacFayden's aid in the box for Boston in the eighth.

Tigers Bow in Tenth; Mack Rookie Stars

Philadelphia, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—The Athletics made it two straight over Detroit by winning today's game by a score of 2 to 1 in 10 innings. Bill Shores just shaded Whitlow Wyatt, Tiger rookie from the Three-Eye League.

Eric McNair, $25,000 Memphis and Knoxville shortstop, made his bow with the A's. He got three singles in five attempts and scored the winning run.

Nearby, Garner Up, Victor at Aqueduct

Aqueduct, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—George D. Widener's Nearby, ridden by Mack Garner, scored easily in the Flying Fairy Handicap, a mile gallop, here today. Sage Stable Bravery was second and Belair Stud's Priscilla Carter third and last. The race was the feature of a very ordinary card. Nearby was made an even money favorite and ran and won like such a choice should Bravery had the early speed and led for 5 furlongs, then Nearby came up and easily passing the leader, drew away to win by two lengths while Bravery beat Priscilla Carter four lengths for the place. The time was 1:40 2-5.

Hoffman and White Impress G. W. Coach

Until classes open next Thursday, George Washington's football squad will not reach full strength. Head Coach James E. Pixlee, who is directing the training activities of the Buff and Blue in daily workouts at Central High Stadium, expects about a dozen more candidates to report for the varsity.

"Blackie" Hoffman, a half back from Iowa, and "Duke" White, also a back who attended G. W. last year but did not go out for football, looked best among the 25 hopefuls undergoing a strenuous practice yesterday. In the scrimmage which topped off the afternoon's work, Hoffman flashed fine ball-toting ability while White, in the role of defensive full back, inserted his six feet of heft into the proceedings with telling effect.

Beginning Monday, the Colonials will transfer their trajning stunts to West Potomac Park.

HOMER TO JOIN BEARS.

Chicago, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Walter Homer, star full back of the Northwestern Team a year ago, has changed his mind about assisting Dick Hanley in developing the 1929 Wildcats Eleven, and will play with the Chicago Bears, of the National Professional Football League, this fall. Homer had a verbal contract to assist.

Harvard Likely to Start Season With 11 Veterans

(This is another of a series of stories dealing with football prospects at major institutions.)

By WILLIAM R. KING
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—The widely scattered sons of Old John Harvard are entertaining high hopes this season as the Crimson has the most promising football squad that has assembled in the stadium since the days of the immortal Percy Haughton.

Head Coach Arnold Horween, who has announced his intention of retiring after this year, appears to be the only major football instructor in the country without a troublesome problem to solve. He has in his varsity squad of 46 an even dozen men who have played against Yale and each of the players yet to win an "H" is thoroughly familiar with his system, based entirely on the principle that the best defense is a strong attack.

The Harvard Team has been out only five days this fall, but as a result of three weeks of intensive spring practice Horween finds himself able to order a long and rugged scrimmage for tomorrow morning. The line which will undoubtedly be his first-string combination is now complete except for one position, right tackle, and there are seven promising candidates battling for this vacancy.

O'Connell and Douglas Likely Ends.

Dick O'Connell and Jim Douglas, both of whom have been starters against Yale, appear to have first call on the end posts. Capt. Jim Barrett is a certainty for left tackle, and the middle of the line will probably go unchanged as Bill Tichnor and John Trainer, regular guards, and Ben Tichnor, last year's first-string pivotman, are again available.

Each of the above-named has at least three high-grade understudies on the varsity squad alone and that number can be safely doubled when the junior-varsity forwards are taken into consideration. Horween always keeps a close watch on his scrubs and every outstanding "blackshirt" is certain of promotion.

The back field outlook is equally rosy though Art French, last year's captain, and Dave Guaranaccia, stars of the last year's Yale victory, have graduated, their absence will have but little effect on the Crimson's attack. The squad contains seventeen competent ball carriers, including two thoroughly seasoned quarter backs who will have plenty of trouble keeping their jobs from two sophomores of rare promise.

Putman Has Narrow Edge at Quarter.

Eliot Putnam, starting quarter back in the 1928 Yale game, appears to have the narrowest of edges on his rivals but Wally Harper, regular full back, seems capable fo retaining that position. Among the outstanding half backs are Art Huguley, Joe Potter and Tom Mason, track captain-elect, all lettermen; Tommy Gilligan, who saw much service last season; his brother, Francis; Bernard White and the Devens brothers, Arthur and Charlie.

In spite of all this wonderful material, the Harvard coaching staff is not anticipating a perfect season. The schedule is the most difficult in years as it has but two "soft" teams. Harvard will probably get off to a flying start against Bates and Hampshire, the first two opponents, but then comes the Army with Dartmouth, Florida, Michigan, Holy Cross and Yale following.

CONVERTIBLE BONDS LOSE RECENT GAINS

General List Turns Soft With the Market's Tone Weak at Close.

FEW CARRIERS HOLD UP

New York, Sept. 20 (A.P.).—Convertibles softened in the bond market today and their action, which was in line with the tone of the general list, resulted in a preponderance of minus signs at the close. Time money was firm, at 5 per cent, for all maturities, with a light inquiry reported. Liquidation of corporation mortgages was small, but it was noticeable in all groups.

The Communication Co. convertibles lost virtually all of their recent large gains. American Telephone 4½s sold off throughout most of the session and closed 1¼ points net lower. International Telephone 4½s proved less resistant and dipped 3½. Atchison 4½s were in some demand until the late trading, when they dropped about 3 points, to finish slightly less than a point below the Thursday final.

American International 5½s, Commercial Investment Trust 5½s and Reading Coal & Iron 6s proved exceptions to the downward trend in the stock feature section, the first named selling up to the new high of 122¼ on large accumulation and closing at 120⅜, or 4¾ net higher, while the commercial debenture made a net advance of 1¾. The Reading bonds gained about 4. American I. G. Chemical 5½s eased off to 114, the lowest in several weeks, rallying fractionally at the close.

Rails attracted a small following. Obligations of the Erie Road, which today reported a substantial gain in net operating income for August, sagged. Baltimore & Ohio issues were stationary, while the New York Central, Nickel Plate, Pennsylvania and St. Louis & San Francisco groups ruled firm. Speculative carriers displayed mixed tendencies. Seaboard Air Line obligations sold off about a point each, but Seaboard All-Florida 6s were bought at higher levels.

Neither the industrial nor public utility groups showed much disposition to change. Goodyear Tire & Rubber 6s sold off a point, to the new low of 89, Inland Steel 4½s lost a point and Armour & Co. 5½s nearly the same amount. Foreign sugars weakened.

Argentine government bonds displayed marked firmness in the foreign list. Selling of Peruvian issues sent the first 6s down to the new low of 81.

United States Treasury notes and Liberties had a slim market and were irregular.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

ARLINGTON WOMEN ARRANGE MEETING

Voters Will Hear Candidates Wednesday; Motorist Accused of Murder.

ROAD WORK IS PRESSED

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Meeting at the home of Mrs. Ruby Simpson, president of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County, yesterday afternoon the political committee completed its program for the fall meeting to be held Wednesday afternoon at the Ashton Heights Woman's Club on Clarendon avenue.

The meeting will be preceded by a luncheon, to be served at 1 o'clock. This will be followed by addresses by several candidates for State and local offices.

Among the speakers will be James H. Price, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor; Col. John R. Saunders, Democratic candidate for attorney general; Callon B. Jones, independent candidate for lieutenant governor; Capt. Berkley, independent candidate for attorney general; Louis A. MacMahon, Republican candidate for the House of Delegates; and Hugn Reid, Democratic candidate for the House of Delegates.

The president has announced that the speaking will be public. An executive session will follow the speaking.

Given a hearing before Police Judge Harry R. Thomas yesterday, Robert S. Krezell, 21 years old, of 1926 Newhampshire avenue, Washington, was held for action of the grand jury on a charge of murder. Bond was fixed at $2,000.

Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth informed the court Krezell is being held technically on a charge of murder, but that the State will attempt to convict him for involuntary manslaughter.

Krezell was the driver of an automobile that on the morning of September 12 left the Richmond-Washington highway near Potomac, turning over and instantly killing William C. Robinson, 38 years old, of 124 North Pitt street, Alexandria. Krezell escaped injury.

According to the testimony of Policeman George Embrey, Krezell was under the influence of liquor. Other witnesses introduced by the State alleged the car to have been going at a high rate of speed at the time of the accident.

Krezell was represented by State Senator Frank L. Ball and Hugh Reid. Reese Duncan represented the Robinson family; while the prosecution was in the hands of Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth. Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, has visited Krezell at the jail. It was learned that his interest was due to the fact that Krezell is a former citizen of his State.

With all public utilities, with the exception of the Rosslyn Gas Co., well ahead of him, Contractor John H. Olcott, who has the contract for the widening of Wilson boulevard from Clarendon avenue to the Military road in Rosslyn, announced last night that on Monday morning the laying of the black top will be started from Clarendon avenue and continue to Virginia avenue, a distance of four blocks. He hopes to be able to continue the laying of the surface as far as Oak street.

The Rev. Thomas J. Healy has arrived in Clarendon, where he will become assistant pastor at St. Charles Catholic Church. Father Healy was ordained in May and made a trip to Europe before being assigned to duty here. Owing to the increased attendance at St. Charles Church, the Rev. Thomas A. Rankin, the pastor, will inaugurate on Sunday, October 6, a schedule of three masses. They will be held at 7:15 a. m., 9:15 a. m. and 11:15 a. m. The 9:15 o'clock service will be especially for children and will be followed by Sunday school services.

The executive committee of the guild of St. George's Episcopal Church at Parlee, meeting yesterday afternoon at the parish hall, completed plans for the holding of a reception to the new rector, the Rev. Henry J. Miller, Saturday night, October 5.

The Arlington County Civic Federation will hold a card party tonight in the auditorium of the Potomac Town Hall. Mrs. Naomi P. Craver is chairman.

L. C. McNemar has been elected chairman of the membership committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation to fill the vacancy caused by resignation of Mrs. Joseph Haley.

The Cherrydale Council of the Daughters of America will hold a benefit card party Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. William Topley, Cedar street, Cherrydale, at 8 o'clock.

The Fairfax County Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has voted to take up in the coming year educational work for benefit of Virginia's mountain white families, the marking of historical spots in Fairfax County and promotion of patriotic education in the county public schools.

The following committee chairmen have been appointed: Education, Mrs. Katherine Walters; program, Mrs. H. W. Perry; historic spots, Mrs. Tupper Stone; magazine, Mrs. Harry Keyser; publicity, Mrs. Joseph Berry; Americanization, Mrs. Smith Rucker; flag usage, Mrs. Durward Smith; genealogy, Mrs. W. W. Snyder; better movies, Mrs. Carroll Shreve, and visiting, Mrs. A. B. King.

Members of the Clarendon Rebekah Lodge, No. 28, and Arlington Lodge, No. 193, I. O. O. F., will attend church services tomorrow morning at the Clarendon Presbyterian Church. Members of both lodges will meet at the Odd Fellows Hall at 10:30 o'clock.

Both morning and evening services tomorrow at the Clarendon Baptist Church will be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell. At the morning service his subject will be "The Church Doctrine: Should We Know It?" At the evening services he will preach on "The Church Commission: Should We Know It?"

Tomorrow, the beginning of fall devotional week, special services will be conducted and they will be held each evening during the week, with the exception of Saturday night.

Tuesday will be observed as day of prayer for State missions. The meeting will open in the morning at 11 o'clock. There will be a box lunch at 12:30 p. m., to be followed by an afternoon session.

Flooded with opposition, the Arlington County Zoning Commission, meeting in joint session with the county board of supervisers at the Arlington County Courthouse last night, after listening for more than four hours to those for and against the application of the Sun Oil Co. for a permit to establish a storage plant in Rosslyn, reserved its decision. The chairman, Fred Gosnell, announced that a careful study of the plans and specifications would be made.

Capt. Crandal Mackey, chief council for the opposition, declared that it would be an outrage to grant the permit.

"I have petitions signed by 57 property owners on Mackey Hill opposing this application, and there is but 1 on the hill who does favor it," he said. "It would injure every piece of property on the hill."

"We are not opposed to this plant coming to Arlington County, but we do oppose the proposed location. Put it where there are other oil companies are and where there are no residences and there will be no objection."

Capt. Mackey filed with the commission copies of resolutions opposing the location of the plant on Mackey Hill from the Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Counties Real Estate Boards, the Arlington County Civic Federation, the Lyon Village Citizens Association and petitions signed by 117 residents other than those on the hill.

Dr. J. N. Roberts, whose home is within 170 feet of where it is proposed to locate four of the huge tanks, voiced strong opposition. Others who spoke in opposition were Maj. Cole, Frank G. Campbell and Charles Garrel.

Thomas Phillips represented the oil company.

Friends Replace Fowls Stolen From Woman

Special to The Washington Post.

Forrestville, Va., Sept. 20.—As a result of a surprise party, that really was a surprise, the depopulated chicken house at the farm home of Mrs. Nora Shuler is again filled with fowls.

About a month ago thieves stole all of Mrs. Shuler's chickens. Realizing the seriousness of her loss, her friends got together and last Wednesday night surprised her with a hen party. Each one brought a chicken, some of them two or three. A count revealed 81 new chickens in the henhouse.

VIRGINIA'S APPLE HARVEST IS BEGUN

Tremendous Crop Will Be Gathered Early This Year, Growers Say.

CANNING PLANTS BUSY

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 20.—Harvesting of a commercial apple crop of approximately 700,000 barrels, or 2,100,000 bushels, was begun today in Frederick County by an army of pickers, graders, packers and other employes. Work will continue under favorable weather conditions until the latter part of October. Picking of late varieties was begun about a week earlier than normal, due to the season having been advanced by trees blossoming the middle of April.

A large part of the crop of the Winchester district was sold on the trees recently by owners to representatives of commission houses, who do the picking and marketing, but a number of the largest growers have consistently declined to sell on the trees, preferring to pack their fruit under private trade-marks and do their own marketing. Much of the Frederick County crop, always the largest in Virginia, goes to British markets.

Factories Are Busy.

While No. 1 grades are shipped in barrels, most of the other apples are sold to by-product plants, and those located here have begun a busy season, which will last until late in the winter. These factories use thousands of tons of fruit in the manufacture of vinegar, apple-sauce, canned apples, jellies and evaporated fruit. The bulk of the by-product fruit is being sent to cold storage and withdrawn as needed, instead of piling it up in the yards of the plants. One of these plants is said to be the largest apple factory in the world.

Output Is Heavy.

The same plants put up 11,096,000 household-sized cans of apples. The storage capacity of three Winchester corporations now totals 800,000 barrels, almost half the entire storage capacity in Virginia.

The State now has 8,000,000 bearing apple trees, on which 80,000,000 gallons of spray material was used last year. This would have filled 22,820 miles of 4-inch pipe and would cover 245 acres 1 inch deep. The apple crop of Virginia this year is estimated at 3,000,000 barrels, which, placed end to end, would reach 1,348 miles, fill a 40-foot street 2 miles long almost 30 feet deep, or cover 28 acres 10 feet deep. Placed end to end on a 20-foot road, they would reach 112 miles, or further than from here to Baltimore.

Charles Town Arson Case Set for Oct. 3

Charles Town, W. Va., Sept. 20.—The trial of Theodore W. Allen, under indictment for arson, has been set for Wednesday, October 3, in circuit court here. Allen is a former Jefferson County constable and was indicted with Frank Billmeyer and Winton Golladay, who are now serving two-year sentences in the West Virginia Penitentiary on two counts of arson. The accused was convicted last fall on one of the indictments, but was awarded a new trial by Judge Rodgers several months ago.

William Tillett, who was charged with the same crimes, was acquitted on one indictment.

Three Cumberland Boys Made Eagle Scouts

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 20.—At a court of honor at the Cumberland Fair Grounds this evening the silver eagle badge, the high rank in the Boy Scouts, was conferred on Scouts George Perdew, Troop 11, and Arthur Laney and Jack Robb, Troop 13, this city. Following the court of honor the boys built a camp fire, sang songs and put on stunts. They set their tents on the grounds and spent the night.

Scouts from Troop 13 were presented with the standard camper emblems.

MARION STRIKE CASE MISTRIAL DECLARED

Hoffman and Others Find Hearing Halted as One Prisoner Escapes.

SAWS WAY FROM JAIL

Marion, N. C., Sep. 20 (A.P.).—A mistrial was declared in the trial of Alfred Hoffman, Southern representative of the United Textile Workers, and five associates here today when it was discovered that J. Hugh Hall, one of the defendants, had sawed his way from jail during the night. They were charged with inciting a revelling and insurrection against the State.

N. A. Townsend, executive counselor to Gov. O. Max Gardner, in court at the time, immediately called the goveror, and November 11 was set for a special term to try the cases.

Judge John H. Harwood, of Bryson City, presiding, anounced that a special venire of 100 men would be called from Rutherford County, adjoining McDowell, in which the trial was being held.

On learning of the delivery, Judge Harwood said the trial could not continue because the other defendants were under joint indictment with Hall.

The trial was begun yesterday. The jury was selected and testimony of one witness had been completed when court adjourned.

Hall escaped with three other men, the quartet sawing the bars in a jail window. With him in the delivery were Ernest Browning, charged with fighting; Frank Wells, held for making liquor, and Turner Harris, charged with temporary larceny of an automobile.

Hall had not been employed in textile mill work and was not represented by counsel during the trial. He, with Hoffman, Lawrence Hogan, union leader; Wes Fowler, Will Russell and Del Lewis, strikers, were on trial as a result of disorders on August 19 in connection with a textile strike. Sheriff Oscar Adkins and a group of his deputies were attacked when they attempted to return to a company house furniture belonging to a worker that had been removed by strikers.

Sixty men were indicted for participation in the disturbace, but only six were brought to trial this week.

College Seeking Auditorium Fund

United Brethren Group to Be Asked for Sum of $20,000.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 20.—The Virginia Conference of the United Brethren Church, in annual session at Keyser, W. Va., next week, will be asked for an appropriation of $20,000 to pay half the costs of a new gymnasium-auditorium building at Shenandoah College, at Dayton, four miles from here, it was revealed here last night.

The Alumni Association of Shenandoah College has agreed to subscrioe $20,000 to the building providing the trustees of the institution obtain an equal appropriation from the Virginia conference, under whose auspices the college is conducted.

Plans of college officials call for immediate construction of the building so that it will be available for the coming basket ball season. At present, the college is without gymnasium and auditorium facilities.

Other plans of the college call for the laying out of a modern athletic field on a plot adjacent to the campus For several years, Shenandoah College has leased grounds for its athletic activities.

Gasoline Tank Blast Hurts Two at Danville

Special to The Washington Post.

Daville, Va., Sept. 20.—A thousand-gallon gasoline tank, supposedly empty, exploded this morning near a local foundry, injuring two mechanics who were stopping leaks with an acetylene torch. McLeon Riggan is in the hospital, his eyes burned, his face disfigured and with numerous bruises after being hurled 20 feet by the blast. John Ashworth, dazed by the shock, fled from the plant aflame, was overtaken by pedestrians who beat out the fire.

The heat of the torch is believed to have vaporized a small quantity of gasoline in the container, this developing pressure and exploding. The concussion shook the neighborhood.

Jury Disagrees In Cleric's Trial

Former Kenilworth Pastor Was Once Convicted of Seduction.

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Sept. 20.—The trial of the Rev. Noah B. Farris, former pastor of the Elm Street Baptist Church at Kenilworth, Dinwiddie County, near Petersburg, charged with seduction, the complainant being a young woman of his congregation, which has occupied the attention of the Circuit Court of Dinwiddie County since Tuesday last, was concluded last night after the jury had deliberated for several hours The jury, however, failed to agree on a verdict and were discharged.

It is reported that three ballots were taken by the jury before reporting to the court its inability to arrive at a verdict. This was Farris' second trial. His first trial was in the Circuit Court of Dinwiddie County last October, where he was found guilty and his punishment fixed by the jury at five years in the penitentiary.

Judge Cox granted the accused a new trial in July last when D. H. Mann, an attorney of Petersburg, counsel for the defense, petitioned this action on the grounds of later discovered evidence.

Farris, who has been at liberty on a bail bond since the charge was brought against him, was again released on bail in the sum of $5,000 for his appearance in the Circuit Court of Dinwiddie County on December 17 next. The trial attracted much attention, and each day the courtroom was packed with spectators.

TWO ARE INDICTED IN STILL SLAYING

Deputy Sheriff Shot Down During Raid Near Thurmont in July.

ARE HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 20.—The grand jury today returned indictments of murder in the first degree against Charles Lewis, of near Thurmont, and Lester Clarke, of Hagerstown, in connection with the shooting of Deputy Sheriff Clyde L. Hauver in a raid on a big still near Thurmont July 31 Osby McAfee, of near Thurmont, who, with Lewis and Clarke, has been held in jail without bail since the homicide, will be used by the State as a witness against the accused.

McAfee, it is alleged, informed the officers of the location of the still. Four deputy sheriffs, including Hauver, then went to the site. With Hauver and Deputy Vernon Redmond leading, the officers made their way through mountain undergrowth for about 150 yards and came upon the still, one of the largest ever raided in the Catoctin Mountains. An exchange of shots took place at close range between the officers and moonshiners, and Hauver fell with a bullet in his head. He was brought to the City Hospital, where he died an hour later.

Lloyd Lewis, said to have been shot while running away from the still, was arrested the next day. His identity was learned when he went to a hospital for treatment for a bullet wound in his hand. Six or eight other persons were arrested the following week, all of whom were released on bail, charged with manufacture of liquor. Charles Lewis, Clarke and McAfee were held without bail.

Farmer's Wife Flags Train, Saves Man's Life

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 20.—An accident reported here today disclosed a farmer's wife as a heroine who came to the rescue in the nick of time.

Clarke Yost, Glove Gap, salesman, was driving from Smithfield to Jacksonburg when his car plunged down a hillside, turned over three times, and landed upon the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks, pinning him beneath. Mrs. Alonzo A. Craig saw the accident from a window of her home, ran down the track, tore off a piece of her skirt and flagged passenger train No. 42, bound for New Martinsville, stopping it just ahead of the wreck. Yost was seriously injured.

Martinsburg Boy, 10, Killed in Machinery

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 20.—Charles W. Smeltzer, 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. William Smeltzer, was crushed to death in a fruit products plant here this afternoon. The boy, playing in the plant where his father worked, became caught in the conveyor and was carried into the machinery. His father accidentally looked up just as the body, badly crushed, fell from the machinery and dropped into his arms.

An inquest has been called for Tuesday.

POLLARD DECRIES SLINGING OF MUD

Democrat Asks Opponents to Take Bitterness Out of Campaign.

G.O.P. CHARGES REFUTED

Special to The Washington Post.

Warm Springs, Va., Sept. 20.—Invading the Valley section of the State for the first time, Dr. John Garland Pollard, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, in an address here today and at the neighboring city of Clifton Forge tonight, served notice that on his part the campaign will be free from bitterness and mud slinging.

Dr. Pollard informed his opponent, Dr. William Moseley Brown, of the Republican anti-Smith coalition, that he intends to conduct a campaign "free from unpleasant personalities in which he (Brown) has been indulging."

The Williamsburg leader added that he expects to make his appeal to the voters of the Old Dominion in a "dignified manner and on a high plane."

Ignores His Opponents.

The Pollard addresses were seen as answering reports that mud slinging, rivaling the Presidential contest of last fall, was impending in Virginia. Dr. Pollard tried to make it clear that he intends to present State issues only in his appeal to the electorate, thus ignoring the challenge of Dr. Brown and Robert H. Angell, of Roanoke, Republican State chairman, that Al Smith in 1932, Raskobism and Tammany Hall "are vital issues in the present campaign."

In his address here, Pollard commented upon the temporary absence of his opponent from the stump and took this factor in the occasion to declare the kind of campaign he plans to conduct. Dr. Brown will resume his speaking activities at Staunton next Monday night. The coalition candidate will make his second invasion of the Shenandoah Valley, which has a big Republican vote.

Study Real Issues.

"It is now reported," said Dr. Pollard, "that my opponent has temporarily withdrawn from the stump and has begun to study the real issues of the campaign, and that hereafter his campaign will be free from the unpleasant personalities in which he has been indulging. I sincerely hope that the rumor is true.

"I am anxious that this campaign, from now on, be conducted in a dignified manner and on a high plane. I want to see the discussions highly informative. The great need of the day is that the people may get the real facts concerning their government. Honest discussion is highly valuable, and I shall meet the real arguments of my opponent with all consideration and respect."

Pollard then launched into an answer to Republican charges that Virginia has the "worst government in the Western Hemisphere," as made by Henry W. Anderson, State G. O. P. leader and a member of President Hoover's crime commission. Dr. Polard declared the charge is not borne out by facts. He then devoted much time to pointing out what he termed the accomplishments of the present Democratic administration in Virginia, and particularly with regard to the advent of a new industrial era in the Old Dominion. In citing the prosperity in Virginia under a Democratic administration Dr. Pollard remarked that "the Republican party does not have a corner on prosperity, as it is sometimes claimed."

Man Weds Sister Of Burned Fiancee

Norman B. Landreau, City Lawyer, Takes Wife After Tragedy.

Norman B. Landreau, Washington attorney, yesterday married Miss Caroline Hill Griffin, of 5709 Thirty-third street northwest, sister of his former fiancee, Miss Eleanor Griffin, who was burned to death at Quantico, Va., in February, 1927.

With Landreau and another man, the two sisters attended a dance in the officers' quarters at Quantico the night of the fire. After the dance the girls went to the home of Lieut. and Mrs. A. R. Holderby to spend the night.

Early the next morning a sentry at the post noticed flames shooting from the cottage. He spread the alarm. Bravely fighting the flames the Marine fire department rescued Mrs. Holderby and Miss Caroline Griffin, who was so seriously affected by the smoke that her life was despaired of for several days. They also brought out the bodies of Lieut. Holderby and his 4-year-old daughter, Clotilde. Miss Eleanor Griffin was alive when rescued, but she died en route to the Naval Hospital.

28 STUDENT NURSES GET FIRST TRAINING

52 More to Enter University of Virginia School by Next Week.

MANY ARE REJECTED

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 20.—Twenty-eight student nurses, part of the record class of 52 to be admitted to the University of Virginia School of Nursing this month, entered training today. The others will report next week. More than 500 applications had to be rejected to keep registration within bounds, so Miss Josephine McLeod, superintendent of nurses and principal of the school, stated today. Aside from the beginners, there are about 125 students in the school at present.

The student nurses who matriculated today immediately entered a preliminary period of sixteen weeks, as the first part of the three-year training course. The preliminary period is designed to give such theory and practice in nursing as will give skill in technique and familiarity with ward routines and hospital discipline, so that at the end of this period the student is able to carry out the ordinary nursing procedure. The course includes anatomy and physiology, bacteriology, chemistry, personal, general hygiene and health, materia medica, principles of nursing, ethics of nursing and dietetics.

The teaching faculty has 13 regular instructors and 23 lecturers from the university medical school faculty.

Following are the nurses who registered today: Mary Boothe, Dublin; Elizabeth Bailey, Covington; Caroline Barger, Natural Bridge Station; Harriet Brown, Goodes; Margaret Ann Dice, Raphine; Alma Dressler, Covington; Edith Farrar, Charlottesville; Elizabeth Gibbs, Aylor; Lucy P. Helms, Callaway; Irene Lohr, Radiant; Mary Sue Lockridge, McDowell; Rebecca Lee, Proffitalta Lair, Goshen; Edith D. Moore, Amherst; Helen Miller, Radford; Lelia Prillman, Callaway; Marie Painter, White Sulphur Spring, W. Va.; Roberta Price, Madison; Florence Pitts, O'Keefe, W. Va.; Hazel Reese, Pulaski; Grace Starke, Crozet; Georgine Smith, Charlottesville; Eva Lewis Smith, Proffit; Suzanne Stevens, Charlottesville; Helen W. Sutherland, North Garden; Lucy Thornton, Crewe; Virginia Wagner, Ivy, and Virginia Reed, Shenandoah.

Man in Jail Plies His Fraud Anyway

Cell Makes Excellent Office, but Too Many Checks Cause Suspicion.

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 20.—Charged with using the mails to defraud and, incidentally, with using the county jail as a temporary office where he was being held on a forgery charge, R. N. Snyder, of this city, was held by a U. S. commissioner here today for Federal Court and ordered sent to the Ohio County Jail when he was unable to give $2,500 bond.

Snyder, it is alleged, managed to send an advertisement, through a trusty at the jail, to a Philadelphia newspaper within the past few weeks, offering to send to any interested persons automobile tires, 30 by 5½, for $2.95 each. Officials say he received a sheaf of replies, from scattered points, with checks and cash. He gave his address as 213 Avery street, this city.

Some of the checks were cashed locally by agents of Snyder, it is said, and his wife cashed some. Officials finally became suspicious and some of his mail was held up pending investigation. Snyder, officials say, has been under suspicion for the same offense previously. The earlier offer was for turkeys at 10 or 12 cents a pound when the market offering brought 40 and 50. He is deluged with orders at that time also.

Tablet Is Dedicated To Episcopal Minister

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 20.—As a tribute to the memory of the Rev. Thomas Hugo Lacy, D. D., for 30 years rector of Tillotson Parish, the membership of Emmaneul Protestant Episcopal Church, Glenmore, yesterday dedicated a bronze tablet.

The services were conducted by the Rt. Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, bishop of the Southern Diocese of Virginia. The ceremonies were simple. Bishop Tucker gave a short sketch of Dr Lacy's labors in the church from the time he graduated from the seminary up to his death.

School Teacher Hurt As Auto Leaves Road

Special to The Washington Post.

Franklin, W. Va., Sept. 20.—Theodore Hinkle, young school teacher of this county, was seriously injured yesterday when the automobile he was driving left the State road on a turn and plunged over a bank, turning over three times. He was found helpless, thrown from the car. Mason Thompson, with him in the car, was pinned under the frame, also unable to extricate himself.

Hinkle's injuries are serious, but are not thought likely to prove fatal. He and Thompson were returning from visiting the former's brother in a Harrisonburg hospital.

Mrs. Anna Earp Smith Buried at Greenwood

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept 20.—Mrs Anna Earp Smith, widow of Atwood Smith, died yesterday morning at her home, "The Hut," at Yancey's Mill this county, and funeral services were held at 10:30 o'clock this morning from Emmaneul Episcopal Church Greenwood.

Mrs. Smith was a daughter of the late George Blakewell and Anna Newton Earp, of Philadelphia, Pa. She was twice married. One sister survives.

Church Trustees Sued By Pastor for Salary

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Sept. 20.—The Rev Thomas B. Hargrave, Negro minister, has filed suit against the trustees of Holbrook Street Presbyterian Church to recover $596, which, he claims, is a balance due him for services rendered to the congregation of which he is pastor.

Five Bus Drivers Draw Suspension

Chauffeurs Are Penalized Following Conviction on Traffic Charges.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 20.—Licenses of five bus drivers, who were convicted on charges of reckless driving or exceeding the speed limit on the Washington boulevard, were suspended today by E. Austin Baughman, commissioner of motor vehicles, following a hearing before George W. Munford, legal examiner for the commission.

Three of the licenses were suspended for 30 days each and the other two for twenty. The difference in the time of the suspensions was a result of the fact that the latter two drivers had no previous violation record.

The charges on which the drivers were convicted were the result of an investigation made September 4, by Paul M. Hart, investigator for the commission.

The two drivers who lose their permits for twenty days are Elwood F. Queen, of the Peoples Rapid Transit Co., and Frank Elmore, of the Nevin Line. The other three drivers are Raymond Romm and Harry E. Gouff, of the Nevin Line, and Otto W. Narer, of the Peoples Rapid Transit Co.

CHURCH CONFERENCE IS SET FOR VIRGINIA

Bishop Denny Is to Preside Over Sessions at Richmond October 16.

COMMITTEES ARE NAMED

Richmond, Va., Sept. 20 (A.P.).—The 147th session of the Virginia Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South will convene at the Broad Street Methodist Church October 16, with Bishop Collins Denny presiding.

Four years ago the Virginia Annual Conference met here in the same church and elected delegates to the general conference, the outstanding issue then being the unification of the church. When the conference meets here again this year that body will also elect delegates to the general conference, which convenes next May in Dallas, Tex.

Dr. Fred R. Chenault, pastor of Broad Street Methodist Church, has announced the committees which have been appointed to make preparations for the meeting and the entertainment of the delegates. Horse Exhibits End Martinsburg Fair

Riding Tournament and Baby Show Also Are Closing Features.

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 20.—The eighth annual Martinsburg Fair, which got under way at Lambert Field here Tuesday, came to a close with today's program, the features of which were a riding tournament, a horse show and a baby show. The attendance, while not yet exactly known, is believed to have been as big as any in the history of the fair.

Officials of the fair association were highly pleased today at the interest manifested this year. Entries of live stock and poultry were so numerous that it became necessary to erect temporary quarters.

Calvin Bohrer, of Blairton, won the horseshoe pitching contest and was awarded a cash prize and the championship of Berkeley County. Fifty-odd horseshoe tossers took part in the contest.

OAKTON WOODWORK SHOP RAZED BY FIRE

First Blaze Extinguished, but Later Flames Take Heavy Toll.

MANASSAS MAN IS HURT

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon 919-J-1.

Fire destroyed the old Whitsell woodworking shop at Oakton, Va., at an early hour yesterday morning. Loss was estimated at about $4,000.

Thursday afternoon the fire departments of Fairfax, McLean and Vienna centered to this same shop to extinguish a small blaze on the roof.

The second blaze was discovered shortly after midnight by a passing motorist, who turned in the alarm. The building was of frame construction filled with wood shavings.

The machinery was soon enveloped in flames. Firemen were powerless to do anything except to keep the sparks from setting fire to nearby residences.

The shop was owned by J. L. Thompson, of Oakton, who had recently purchased it from the estate of J. L. Whitsell. After the fire Thursday afternoon Thompson had made a tour of the property several times, the last one about two hours before the flames were discovered. The fire in the afternoon was believed to have been started by a spark from the exhaust of a gasoline engine, used to run the machinery. The second fire started in about the same place ten hours later and was of unknown origin. The shop and machinery were completely destroyed. No insurance was carried.

C. W. Cordle, 19 years old, of Manassas, Va., and employe of the county highway department, was injured while loading a truck
